Your blessed tears are remembered by your people and loved ones

By Ahmed Al-Jarallah

Editor-in-Chief, the Arab Times

YOUR Highness the Amir Sheikh Mishal Al-Ahmad Al-Jaber Al-Sabah, you are not only the Amir, you are also the father of Kuwait and its people who still remember the tears you shed in the National Assembly on the day of its opening session on Oct 18, 2022.

In the Amiri speech at the time, you laid down the foundations upon which the relationship between the National Assembly and the Council of Ministers should be based. Unfortunately, the concerned parties did not heed them.

Those tears indicated the extent of your concern for Kuwait and what transpired in recent years in terms of the frightening decline caused by certain practices, which continued for more than three decades -- when much ado about nothing prevailed over everything and empty talks produced nothing worth mentioning or remembering.

On that day, Your Highness, many people bet that getting rid of this situation was just a pipe dream, because there was a deep State that extended its tentacles to all State institutions. Some of them occupied top positions.

the art of deception in directing constitutional and legal interpretations according to their whims, making it difficult to get out of the impasse.

Projects were tailored to their demands. They interfered in awarding tenders. They distorted the spirit of the judiciary by interfering in it. They used the State Audit Bureau as their tool and tampered with security, such that it would be at their service.

It is difficult for any ruler to change this situation, especially since the corrupt are among the people who say Kuwait is a State of constitution and law. The leadership is governed by this matter, but on the ground, they sabotage the very State of constitution.

Their bet has always been on setting minefields on the path of development and reforms in order to undermine the gains of any leader who attempts to rectify the situation.

However, fate has put you in front of all the mess witnessed by the people who have no despicable interests; believers of their motherland who want to see it far from corruption and depravity.

Your tears did not drop in vain. You remedied the situation with surgical precision to remove the tumor by suspending seven articles of the Constitution that were necessary for the State and institutions to start the process of healing.

Everyone who met Your Highness heard from you that you would apply justice to everyone, even to yourself and to the seniors before the juniors.

HH Crown Prince to receive citizens

KUWAIT CITY, June 29, (KUNA): The Amiri Diwan on Saturday conveyed to the gracious citizens greetings from His High-ness the Amir Sheikh Mishal Al-Ahmad Al-Jaber Al-Sabah and His Highness the Crown Prince Sheikh Sabah Khaled Al-Hamad Al-Sabah.

The Amiri Diwan also announced that His Highness the Crown Prince would receive citizens on Monday from 7:30 a.m. until 9:30 p.m. at the Diwan of the gracious Al-Sabah Family at Bayan Palace.

Fire tamed at Zour refinery

KUWAIT CITY, June 29, (KUNA): A limited fire that broke out at noon on Saturday at a storage facility in Al-Zour refinery has been doused.

Official spokesperson of Kuwait Integrated Petroleum Industries Company (KIPIC), Ali Al-Ajmi, in a statement to KUNA, expressed gratitude to squads of Kuwait Fire Force for their speedy and effective response, backing KIPIC personnel in containing the blaze rapidly.

He confirmed that the flames caused no damage or injuries.

The fire did not affect production and exportation operations at the refinery, Al-Ajmi affirmed.

On Saturday, June 29 afternoon, the Kuwait Fire Force, under the leadership of Major General Khaled Abdullah Fahd, acting Chief of the Kuwait Fire Force, successfully controlled a ware-house fire at a temporary work site in the Shuaiba Industrial Area. The fire, involving insulation and plastic pipes, was extinguished without any casualties.

The military urged people to avoid approaching the specified locations during the set period and dates for their safety. (KUNA)

KUWAIT CITY: Remittances from the Middle East and North Africa (MENA) region are projected to rebound by 4.3% in 2024, following a decline the previous year attributed to reduced remittances to Egypt, the region's largest recipient, reports Al-Anba daily.

According to a World Bank seen by Bloomberg Middle East, remittances to the MENA region are expected to increase to $58 billion in 2024, up from $55 billion in the preceding year.

In 2021, remittances reached a seven-year peak at $67 billion, rising from $59 billion in 2020, before declining to $65 billion in 2022. The World Bank further anticipates a 5.5% rise to $61 billion in 2025, as stated in their report.

The decline in remittances during 2023, down 15% to $55 billion, was predominantly due to a significant decrease in flows to Egypt. This decline was primarily linked to reduced transfers through official channels, driven by a notable disparity between official and parallel foreign exchange rates, where at one point the dollar surpassed EGP70.

Recent factors such as the devaluation of the Egyptian currency, higher interest rates, successful reviews with the International Monetary Fund, and increased investments from the United Arab Emirates have bolstered confidence in the potential resurgence of remittance flows.

Additionally, the average cost of sending $200 in remittances to the MENA region decreased from 6.7% in Q4 2022 to 5.9% in Q4 2023

TEHRAN: The Iranian Electoral Commission declared on Saturday that a runoff would be held on Friday after neither of the two top candidates garnered the 50 plus one majority of votes in the first round of the snap polling held on Friday.

The second round of the polling will pit the reformist Masoud Pezeshkian against the fundamentalist Saeed Jalili. Both garnered the largest number of the ballots in the first round of the electoral process.

Mohsen Eslami, the commission's spokesperson, said at a news conference, that final results of the presidential election would be determined in the runoff on Friday.

He said Pezekshian won 10.315,991 votes, 42.6 percent of the total ballots, amounting to 24.353,185 -- short of the 50+ votes required to win the top post. (KUNA)

MOSCOW, June 29, (KUNA): The State of Kuwait, represented by the Ministry of Justice, signed with Russia on Friday two agreements for judicial and legal cooperation.

The accords were signed by the Kuwaiti Minister of Justice, Al-Awqaf and Islamic Affairs Dr. Mohammad Al-Wasmi and his Russian coun-Konstantin terpart, Chuychenko, during the 12th International Legal Forum, hosted by the Russian city of Saint Petersburgh.

The Kuwaiti Ministry of Justice said in a statement that signing the accords underlined the good relations tying the two friendly countries, indicating that they aim at establishing effective cooperation in combating crime.

One of the two accords includes procedural terms for criminals' extradition and prosecution regulations according to international norms.

The ministry statement added that the other agreement stipulates that convicts are given the right to spend their time behind bars in their home country.

Saint Petersburg Forum, founded in 2011, is one of the major platforms for global cultural, legal and political dialogue.

The current forum session, due to conclude today, kicked off on Wednesday.

Supporting local entrepreneur and SME community in Kuwait

stc hosts gathering for entrepreneurs under 'weyak' initiative

KUWAIT CITY, June 29: Kuwait Telecommunications Company – stc, a world-class digital leader providing innovative services and platforms to customers, enabling the digital transformation in Kuwait, held a special gathering for entrepreneurs and SMEs as part of its 'weyak' initiative. This event builds on the various activities launched by stc, strategically focusing on empowering the private sector and nurturing SMEs to drive positive economic growth and societal advancement.

The gathering was held at Joe's Restaurant owned by the entrepreneur Abdulaziz Al-Nahes, bringing together over 70 entrepreneurs from diverse sectors in the presence of stc Kuwait CEO, Eng. Muataz Abdullah Aldharrab. The event provided a unique opportunity for networking and collaboration among some of the most influential figures in the business community, including Dr. Saad Al Barrak - former Minister of Oil, Dakhil Al Dakhil - CEO of Rasameel, Dr. Mohammad Al Sayegh - Aseer Time Group Owner, and Bader Aloqaili - CEO of Pick.

The highlight of the evening was a heartfelt speech by engineer Muataz Aldharrab, CEO of stc, who expressed profound gratitude to all attendees for their active participation. Aldharrab emphasized the critical role of the private sector and entrepreneurs in driving societal development and economic progress. He also highlighted stc's ongoing support towards the entrepreneurial ecosystem in Kuwait through various initiatives and activities. He also highlighted that through the 'weyak' initiative, stc aims to cultivate a thriving environment where local businesses can flourish and contribute significantly to the nation's growth.

The event comes as part of stc's broader strategy to support entrepreneurs under the 'wevak' umbrella. The initiative was designed to provide robust support to the entrepreneurial sector, with a particular focus on SMEs, ensuring that they are able to obtain the resources and opportunities needed to succeed in a competitive market. By inviting renowned entrepreneurs to speak about their personal and professional ex-periences, attendees would get a chance to listen to some of the challenges and advice from these experienced professionals that could assist them in successful launching and growing their own personal ventures.

In appreciation of the participants and attendees, stc extended its heartfelt appreciation for the level of enthusiasm and engagement witnessed during the gathering. The company highlighted that it is dedicated to strengthening relationships across various sectors and appreciates the invaluable contributions of the local entrepreneurial community. As part of the 'weyak' initiative, and other programs launched to support entrepreneurs and SMEs, stc will continue to organize and introduce platforms that can assist inspired individuals to pursue their dreams and unique opportunities.

As part of its ongoing efforts, stc also reaffirmed its full support for digital transformation initiatives and projects that will assist SMEs in efficiently managing their operations. Additionally, stc highlighted the different digital services and solutions the company offers, specially catering to SMEs to assist them in streamlining their operations to optimize their business operations. These initiatives, as well as others, reflect the company's dedication to fostering innovation and providing a unique and unparalleled experience for all its customers.

To find out more about stc's sponsorships, promotions, and events, follow stc's official social media platforms, visit one of stc's branches, download mystc mobile application, visit www.stc.com.kw or contact the customer service center by dialing 102 for around the clock assistance

Composite index quantifies level of peacefulness among nations

By Ahmed alsarraf

In May 2007, Australian business-man Steve Killea initiated the development of a composite index aimed at quantifying the level of peacefulness among countries.

This index, known as the Global Peace (GPI), Index comprises indicators, compassing both quantitative and qualitative pects, with scores ranging from 1 to 5. A lower score indicates a higher level of peace within a country. Killea garnered support and endorsement for the GPI from influential figures such as the Dalai Lama, Desmond Tutu, Muhammad Yunus, Mary Robinson, Jimmy Carter, and others. Their moral backing underscored the index's significance in promoting global peace and stability.

Annually, the GPI assesses each country across several critical dimensions and publishes a detailed report. This report is highly regarded by major countries and global entities, influencing investment decisions and diplomatic relations. As a result, the GPI has gained substantial respect and recognition worldwide.

Key factors examined in the GPI include involvement in domestic and international conflicts, casualties from conflicts, levels of internal civil unrest, relations with neighboring countries, social cohesion and trust within the population, percentage of displaced persons, political stability, respect for human rights, risk of terrorist activities, homicide rates, military expenditures, fatio of military personnel to the population, import and export of weapons, accessibility to firearms and military capabilities and development

In the 16th edition of the Global Peace Index for 2024, which evaluates 163 independent countries and regions based on their level of peacefulness, Tunisia emerged as the top-ranked country among the Maghreb nations and fifth overall in the Arab world. This recognition underscores Tunisia's strides towards maintaining peace and stability within its borders.

Yemen remained at the bottom of the rankings, reflecting ongoing challenges and conflicts within the country. Palestine was ranked 145th, while the occupying entity, likely referring to Israel, was positioned at 155th place.

A noteworthy highlight from the 2024 edition was Kuwait's achievement of topping the rankings within the Arab world, securing the 25th position globally.

This accolade represents a significant accomplishment for Kuwaiti governance, underscoring its commitment to peace and stability, and elevating its global standing with profound implications and importance.

Such rankings in the Global Peace Index are crucial as they provide valuable insights into each country's progress and challenges in maintaining peace, influencing international perceptions, policies, and strategic decisions.

After the recent events, particularly the tragic Mangaf fire resulting in innocent casualties due to negligence and corruption, it's commendable how His Excellency the Minister of the Interior responded swiftly.

However, it's crucial to recognize that global indicators are closely monitoring our actions. These indicators emphasize the importance of conscience, adherence to state laws, and above all, the implementation of justice.

In any legal process, it's fundamental to uphold the principle that every accused person is innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

This principle underscores our commitment to the rule of law, which is essential for maintaining societal order and justice. Senior officials, such as the First Deputy Prime Minister, must be keenly aware of these principles and ensure they are upheld in all circumstances.

The Public Prosecution plays a pivotal role in representing society and advocating for justice in accordance with international standards, including those outlined in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, which Kuwait has ratified. Violations of these standards not only tarnish our reputation as a nation and government but also diminish our credibility in honoring international conventions and treaties.

Beyond mere self-respect, our adherence to these principles demonstrates our commitment to justice and fairness for all individuals within our society. It's imperative that we continue to uphold these values rigorously, thereby safeguarding our integrity on the global stage and reinforcing our status as a responsible member of the international community.

e-mail: a.alsarraf@alqabas.com.kw hours to ensure they do not neglect their tasks. He affirmed this is in line with the principles of justice and integrity, and it will guarantee job satisfaction for all employees in the health sector.

He suggested applying the mechanism to all ministry employees on an experimental basis in the initial stage, and then to adopt it fully by taking into account the nature of the work of various health professions. He reiterated that its application will create a suitable work environment for the employees, as they could prove their attendance in a flexible manner.

Municipal Council meet: The Capital Governorate Committee in the Municipal Council, chaired by Dr. Hassan Kamal, will hold its first meeting for the third session on Sunday.

The committee will discuss the following:

Final approval of the decision issued by the council on April 7, 2022 to reorganize Blocks 4 and 7 in Qibla, Kuwait City; ■ Proposal of Municipal Council Chairman Abdullah Al-Mahri to use the vacant land allocated to the Ministry of Education (Block Two in Abdullah Al-Salem suburb) as a public park;

KUWAIT CITY, June 29: The Ministry of Education has opened the door for employees in its headquarters, central directorates and educational districts to submit their complaints regarding the excellent performance bonus for the 2023, reports Al-Anba daily.

The ministry stressed that it will receive such complaints only through its website -- www.moe.edu.kw -- until Aug 11, 2024 including the weekends and holidays. It then reaffirmed its commitment to protect the rights of employees, asserting that each complaint will be reviewed thoroughly and acted on as per the regulations.

The Public Authority for Disabled Affairs (PADA) has coordinated with the Ministry of Health on adding Kuwaiti housewives receiving financial support from PADA to the beneficiaries of Law No. 114/2014 on the health insurance for retirees (Afia), reports Al-Anba daily.

PADA previously addressed the ministry, confirming its agreement on adding housewives to the Afia beneficiaries. It sent a letter in this regard to the ministry in response to the request of housewives to be added to Afia beneficiaries. It called on the ministry to approve the request in order to start taking the necessary measures.

'Why MEW not focusing on using solar & wind energy?'

"THE Kuwaiti citizens wonder why Kuwait, which is a member of the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), and has 7 percent of the world's crude oil reserves and one of the largest sovereign wealth funds in the world, is suffering due to 'programmed power cuts' in the summer when temperatures exceed 51 degrees Celsius (124 Fahrenheit)," columnist Prof. Dr. Bahija Behbehani wrote for Al-Qabas daily.

"The Ministry of Electricity, Water and Renewable Energy announced: 'A programmed power cut will be imposed on some areas when needed during peak hours, from 11 am to 5 pm for a period of one to two hours if neces-a rsary.' "This is to avoid longer power outages. Power was cut off to several residential and the victims of these power cuts were mostly children who are enjoying their summer holidays at home

and the elderly most of whom are suffering from chronic diseases.

"The ministry justified the outage as a result of the inability of power generation stations to meet the increasing demand for electrical loads during peak hours, in addition to the high temperatures.

"When we, the citizens, ask and wonder about the truth of the government's need to resort to cutting off the electricity in this sudden and programmed manner, we know for sure that there is an "electricity crisis" in the country due to the extreme heat and citizens and residents resorting to using cooling and air conditioning devices in their homes which exceeds the capacity of the power stations to handle, especially since these power stations were built several decades ago when the population of the State of Kuwait was only 1.5 million.

"Currently the number of its citizens and residents is approximately 4.5 million individuals, and the power cuts are happening because of the hesitation to build new power stations to keep pace with the increase in consumption and increase in the invention of electronic devices that consume electricity.

"I do not know whether these old power stations are maintained periodically, or did the continuous change of governments in the country cause a lack of interest in maintaining the old power stations and not embarking on new power projects.

"The question is, why the Ministry of Electricity did not plan for the coming years to ensure the continuity of electricity uninterrupted?

"Renewable energy, particularly solar power, emerges as a sustainable solution capable of significantly addressing Kuwait's energy needs.

"Recent advancements have made solar energy more effective and costefficient, presenting ample opportunities for widespread adoption in homes and governmental institutions.

"Encouraging citizens and businesses to embrace solar energy can catalyze this transformation, supported by technical and financial assistance.

"Government leadership is crucial in initiating this shift towards sustainability. By implementing solar energy solutions in government buildings, schools, and universities, Kuwait can set a precedent for the private sector and raise awareness about the benefits of renewable energy.

"This strategic approach not only enhances energy security but also contributes to environmental protection for future generations.

"In essence, the electricity crisis in Kuwait should serve as a catalyst for reevaluating and updating energy strategies. By investing in renewable energy and fostering broad participation from all sectors of society, Kuwait can achieve sustainable energy security while safeguarding the environment.

"This holistic approach will be essential in navigating future challenges and ensuring a resilient energy infrastructure."

"To the Minister of Electricity ... I do not know His Excellency the current Minister of Electricity personally, but I know his father, since he was Undersecretary of the Ministry of Social Affairs, and then its minister. I know his sincerity and dedication to serving Kuwait and its people. I expect that this cub, God willing, is from that lion," columnist Talal Al-Saeed wrote for Al-Seyassah daily.

"Your Excellency, the Minister: There is nothing but wellness that is not appropriate for us at all at this particular time. It is not acceptable to you, it is not supposed to be said, and the Kuwaiti citizen does not accept it.

"In this difficult time, we are in dire need of a comprehensive solution to the issue of power outages. Certain members of society cannot bear the heat even for only a quarter of an hour, such as infants and elderly women, as well as people who need elevators to reach their rooms. Electricity is no longer a luxury. It is an utmost necessity -- one of the most important necessities of life. "Your Excellency, the Minister the

GTD deploys high-tech cameras to tackle rising traffic violations

Municipality issues warnings to 228 violating properties

KUWAIT CITY, June 29: The sixth generation camera system has been activated to capture images of violating motorists near traffic lights and intersections; while the Operations Unit at the General Traffic Department (GTD) in the Interior Ministry will register traffic violations, reports Al-Shahed daily quoting sources.

Sources explained that sixth generation cameras monitor violations like not wearing a seat belt and using the mobile phone by hand while driving, adding the Operations Unit is in charge of imposing fines on violators.

Sources disclosed that the Control Unit records about 100 traffic violations every hour; including using the mobile phone while driving, not focusing on the road and not wearing a seat belt.

Meanwhile, statistics from GTD revealed that the number of using the mobile phone while driving violations reached 186,000 last year.

It can be recalled that in September 2017, the ministry imposed fines on drivers who do not wear seat belts and those who use the mobile phone while driving. However, the lawmakers objected at the time and launched a campaign against the ministry; prompting it to retract the decision. Chaos on the roads resumed as drivers have not been committed to rules on seat belt and mobile phone and other traffic violations. The remarkable increase in the number of traffic violations indicates that many people are ignoring traffic regulations.

The other matter is that you must start where others who came before you left off, that is before the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, and travel to France to complete previous negotiations that took place between the two governments to establish a nuclear electricity generation station that would eliminate the problem once and for all. The negotiations stopped at the issue of the nuclear station's continuous need for cooling water to ensure the continuation of its operation. This might have been difficult in the past -- before the State borders were specified, but now it is different, as it is easy to establish the station on one of the Kuwaiti islands like Boubyan on the opposite side of Mubarak Port on the shore of the Gulf. # 'KGAC commits to fighting drug smuggling at all ports'

KUWAIT CITY, June 29: Director General of Kuwait General Administration of Customs (KGAC) Abdullah Al-Sharhan has affirmed that combating drugs is one of the most important priorities of KGAC; particularly in all customs ports -- land, air and sea, reports Al-Shahed daily.

In a speech on the occasion of International Day against Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking, Al-Sharhan appreciated the Kuwaiti government's keenness to develop human and financial capabilities, and provide all the necessary equipment and devices to combat drugs and prevent its entry into the country. He stressed that KGAC is fully prepared to cooperate with various entities to stop the smuggling of drugs.

It is worth mentioning that in 1987, the United Nations General Assembly set June 26 as International Day against Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking due to the serious drugrelated dangers threatening the whole world.

30-kg hashish seized: In its ongoing efforts to combat drug trafficking and enhance security cooperation, the Ministry of Interior has made a significant break-through when personnel from the Directorate-General Drugs Control, in collaboration with the General Administration of the Coast Guard, arrested two suspects who have a history of drug trafficking, reports Al-Seyassah daily.

The daily said the men were caught in possession of approximately 30 kilos of narcotic hashish, which they intended to sell to consumers in the country.

The Ministry of Interior said the suspects will face legal consequences in line with the law, underscoring its commitment to safeguarding society from the harmful effects of drugs.

The daily added, security operations aimed at combating drug dealers and smugglers are ongoing, with a call for public cooperation. Citizens are encouraged to report any suspicious activities or information through the Emergency No. 112 or the hotline of the DGDC1884141.

228 warnings issued: The Public Relations Department in Kuwait Municipality disclosed that the inspection teams at Ahmadi Municipality branch recently conducted an intensive campaign to make sure that the owners of investment and commercial real estate properties are complying with the relevant regulations, reports Al-Anba daily.

It added that the campaigns conducted by the Safety Department in Mahboula, Mangaf and Fahaheel resulted in the issuance of 228 warnings to those who committed violations that endangered road users, affirming the owners of buildings responded to the warnings and removed the violations.

The Municipality urged the real estate owners and tenants of commercial buildings to comply with the regulations, stressing that the inspection campaigns will continue in order to record any violation and take legal action.

Bag with drugs found at PoJ: Security personnel at the Palace of Justice have found a bag containing heroin and drug paraphernalia in Hall 15, where criminal cases are being heard for the inmates from the Central Prison convicted of drug-related cases, reports Al-Jarida daily.

According to a security source an unidentified person had left the bag near the detainees' area within the hall and escaped from the scene.

The vigilance of the security officers stationed at the Palace of Justice, who routinely conduct searches of the premises before defendants are brought in, prevented the smuggling attempt aimed at supplying drugs to prisoners.

Upon discovering the narcotics and related items, the security personnel immediately seized them and documented the incident. A case has been registered and the Public Prosecution has initiated an investigation into the matter. The security officers involved in finding the drugs have been summoned to give their testimonies.

This incident underscores the ongoing challenges faced by law enforcement and judicial authorities in preventing illicit activities within court facilities, particularly those involving illegal substances being smuggled into prisons.

The swift response by security personnel highlights their commitment to maintaining security and preventing criminal activities within the Palace of Justice premises.

Mol arrest 2 lawyers over fake news: The Ministry of Interior has arrested two lawyers for publishing fake news about Minister of Public Works and Minister of State for Municipal Affairs Dr. Noura Al-Mashaan on the social networking site 'X', reports Al-Seyassah daily.

In a press statement, the ministry affirmed that the relevant law stipulates five years imprisonment for anyone proven to have spread false information.

Earlier, the minister announced that legal measures will be taken against a number of social media accounts that spread rumors and malicious news.

She said there is no truth in what is being circulated on social media about the incident that was fabricated against her.

80 media bodies referred to PP: The Ministry of Information has referred 80 media institutions to the Public Prosecution and withdrew the licenses of 90 electronic newspapers for committing violations, reports Al-Shahed daily.

The ministry explained such measures were taken as per the relevant laws on organizing publication and printing as part of the commitment to responsible freedom of the press and to prevent media chaos.

It said the committee tasked to uncover media violations is keen on observing the websites, social media accounts, newspapers and television channels in order to make sure no violations are committed. It also stressed the need to adhere to the principles of accuracy, honesty and credibility in reporting. nel involved in the project and reiterated the leadership's unwavering support to enhance the efficiency and readiness of the armed forces.

This inspection visit is part of a series of field visits undertaken by Al-Muzain to various military units and projects, aimed at monitoring progress and ensuring that all plans are executed efficiently and effectively to achieve their objectives.

Accompanying Al-Muzain during the visit were Major General Engineer Salah Saud Nasser, Assistant Chief of Staff for Supply and Logistics; Major General Khaled Shujaa Faihan, Commander of Ali Al-Sabah Military College; and Engineer Hussam Al-Atiqi, Director of the Projects Department at Military Facilities Engineering.

Kuwait faces severe shortage of national medical personnel, expert urges reforms

Health Ministry seeks 1,000 graduates annually

By Inaas Awadh

Al-Seyassah/Arab Times Staff

KUWAIT CITY, June 29: Director of the Psychiatry Depatment at the College of Medicine in Kuwait University Dr. Sulaiman Al-Khudhari sounded the alarm about the shortage of local medical personnel that was evident during the Corona crisis; clarifying this is a global phenomenon, but it is more severe in the Gulf region.

He said Kuwait ranks fourth in the Gulf in terms of the number of doctors

Al-Huwailah vows to enhance social care

Minister of Social Affairs Dr. Amthal Al-Huwailah on Friday affirmed that efforts for developing social care would proceed.

Dr. Al-Huwailah, in a statement to Kuwait News Agency (KUNA) during her inspection of the new juvenile care complex in Al-Sulaibiya district, said construction of this facility is a significant step forward for enhancing the quality of life for delinquent juveniles and re-merging them into the community, in an effective and constructive fashion.

The ministry is keen on providing all kinds of care and support for the hosted youth, said Dr. Al-Huwailah, also the Minister of Family and Childhood Affairs and the Minister of State for Youth Affairs, indicating that such a well-equipped facility would provide this segment of the society with comprehensive services.

Such a developed center also provides a suitable environment to boost the efforts to alter their behaviors and encourage them to acquire useful hobbies, explained the minister in her remarks to KUNA. (KUNA) compared to the population, with 22 doctors for every 10,000 people. He pointed out there are 17,000 doctors in Kuwait and only 4,000 of them are Kuwaitis, adding that the Health Ministry's annual need for medical manpower with various medical specializations is estimated at about 1,000 graduates.

In a panel discussion organized by the Women's Cultural and Social Society recently with the theme, 'The scholarship plan for medical specializations is compatible with the quality of education and meeting the needs of the labor market', Al-Khudhari revealed the Kuwait 2035 vision aims to increase the capacity of hospitals by not less than 7,000 beds, which means doubling number of doctors and other medical personnel.

He talked about the scholarship problems and the difference in conditions between universities; pointing out that the Ministry of Higher Education made a mistake in making the circular on the suspension of scholarships in all universities in Egypt and Jordan, which came in the wake of the forged certificates crisis.

He pointed out the suspension decision was taken after the Ministry of Health sent a letter, stating that the quality of graduates from these universities is not good. He added: "This letter was based on the opinion of consultants, not a study. Why do we focus on a specific group of countries in terms of scholarships?!

He presented a number of solutions to the shortage of medical personnel in the country; such as increasing the number of seats in the College of Medicine, organizing scholarships to Egypt and Jordan, opening the door for scholarships in other Arab and foreign countries, opening other medical colleges in Kuwait, negotiating to improve scholarship conditions and increasing seats in the universities included in the scholarship plan, a national unified examination for licensing, and ensuring a minimum level of medical knowledge.

On the other hand, former Dean of the College of Allied Medicine and member of the Kuwaiti Society for Quality Education Dr. Saud Al-Obaidi spoke about the college's failure in the special nursing education program that was added in 2022 and transferred to the Public Authority for Applied Education. He noted that there are more than 24,000 nurses in Kuwait; but the number of nationals among them is very small -- not exceeding four percent as their number is about 1,000.

Al-Obaidi also proposed a package of solutions, the most important of which is establishing a university hospital for the College of Medicine in Kuwait. He said Kuwait is the only Gulf country that has no university hospital.

He suggested increasing the spatial capacity of the college in order to enhance its ability to increase the number of students, professors and course. In this manner, the college will be able to implement its strategic vision, which includes establishing several bachelor's programs that serve the allied medicine sector, such as respiratory system, foot care, speech, hearing and clinical exercise physiology. Investors must be encouraged to establish colleges in the private sector that contribute to teaching specializations in allied medical sciences to meet the State's need for national medical professionals, he concluded. KUWAIT CITY, June 29: The French Ambassador to Kuwait HE Claire Le Flecher, has expressed her deep admiration for Kuwaiti women, their culture, creativity, and accomplishments across various domains, reports Al-Qabas daily.

She made the remarks during the third edition of the Women's Diwaniya hosted at her residence, attended by a diverse group of female leaders. "I greatly adnire the culture and capabilities of Kuwaiti women, who have played a pivotal role in the societal building and renaissance," Ambassador Le Flecher stated. "They have excelled in numerous sectors, achieving significant milestones both locally and internationally."

She further expressed her honor in hosting the Women's Diwaniya, which serves as a platform bringing together Kuwaiti and non-Kuwaiti women from diverse fields including business, politics, arts, culture, and fashion.

"This initiative aims to provide an inspiring and empowering platform for talented and influential women to connect, share their stories, and foster strong networks of solidarity," Le Fleischer emphasized. "Similar to traditional diwaniyas, our women's Diwaniya convenes weekly, every Wednesday, presented in a modern and innovative format."

Highlighting the broader objectives of the gathering, she noted, "Beyond networking, this forum is about creating a space for candid discussions, sharing challenges, and celebrating successes. It aims to cultivate a culture of empowerment and resilience, fostering both personal and professional growth to drive positive societal change."

Le Fleischer expressed her delight in seeing new participants join each gathering, envisioning that by nurturing these connections and promoting collaboration, the influence of Kuwaiti women across all sectors will continue to expand, inspiring future generations to follow their lead.

In response, attendees of the Diwaniya lauded its cultural diversity, underscoring Kuwait's inclusive embrace of all nationalities and cultures.

Sabah AI-Ahmad Center launches apprenticeship program for 2024

KUWAIT CITY, June 29: The Sabah Al-Ahmad Center for Giftedness and Creativity, part of the Kuwait Foundation for the Advancement of Sciences, announced the launch of the "Apprenticeship" program for 2024, under the theme 'Develop Your Practical Skills', reports Al-Qabas daily.

This initiative aims to train young Kuwaitis as professional trainers in technology, integrated sciences, and digital manufacturing.

Neda Al-Daihani, the center's general manager, stated in a press release, "Registration for the program begins on the 30th of this month and continues until July 13th. It is designed to familiarize trainers with the latest techniques and tools in technology, integrated sciences, and technological competitions. The program will feature intensive workshops aimed at enhancing practical skills and developing educational capabilities among trainers."

Al-Daihani outlined the center's strategy, emphasizing, "Our plan includes offering intensive apprenticeship and on-the-job training programs to elevate the technical knowledge and skills of trainers. This will enable them to deliver high-quality training using the latest methodologies and techniques."

She added that "this year's program aims to cultivate a generation of skilled trainers who will contribute actively to the field. By enhancing the efficiency, skills, and educational capabilities of participants in technology-related domains, we aim to prepare them effectively for future roles in training and education."

Preferential treatment stirs public outcry

Controversy over equivalency for university admissions resurfaced

KUWAIT CITY, June 29: The controversy over discrepancies in the equivalency of high school certificates for university admissions in Kuwait has resurfaced, particularly focusing on allegations of preferential treatment towards graduates from foreign schools, reports Al-Seyassah daily.

This issue has gained prominence following the recent announcement of high school exam results for public school students, with implications for scholarships in medical specialties.

Parents have raised concerns about what they perceive as unfair treatment. They point out that while an American high school graduate achieving 93% is awarded a perfect score of 100% under the points system adopted by the Department of Special Education in the Ministry of Education, public school graduates do not receive similar treatment, despite their achievements in medicine.

The complaint highlights a change in the mechanism for equating American high school grades, where points are directly added and multiplied to reflect a 100% score, simplifying the equivalence process.

This contrasts with the stricter assessment criteria applied to local school graduates.

In response, educational sources have refuted the allegations, asserting that the equivalency mechanism follows international standards.

For instance, a foreign high school graduate earning an (A+) grade may receive a percentage between 97% and 100%, depending on the grading scale. Meanwhile, a (A-) grade might correspond to 96%. This approach aligns with global practices where universities set specific percentage thresholds for admissions into various disciplines, including medicine.

University opens doors for admission inquiries

Furthermore, these sources emphasize the necessity for foreign schools to maintain academic accreditation to ensure credibility in their grading systems. They also highlight ongoing coordination between universities and the Ministry of Higher Education to uphold rigorous standards in determining admission criteria.

In conclusion, the debate underscores the complexities inherent in aligning diverse educational systems within Kuwait's higher education framework. The challenge lies in balancing fairness for all students while upholding academic integrity and international equivalency standards.

Partnership enhances customer service efficiency

PACI, Zain sign collaboration agreement

KUWAIT CITY, June 29: The Pub-lic Authority for Civil Information (PACI) and Mobile Telecommunications Company - Zain announced the signing of a collaboration agreement. This partnership will integrate PA-CI's Geographic Information Systems (GIS) portal and 'Kuwait Finder' services with Zain's systems, allowing the company to significantly improve its customer service efficiency across multiple levels.

The announcement was made at a signing ceremony held at PACI headquarters, attended by PACI Acting General Manager Mansour Al Mithin, Zain Kuwait CEO Nawaf Algharabally, Zain Kuwait Chief Government Affairs and Business Development Officer Malek Jaber Al Sabah, along with other PACI officials and Zain executives

PACI Acting General Manager Mansour Al Mithin welcomed Zain to the list of organizations benefiting from PACI's GIS services, which are provided to over 300 government and private organizations in Kuwait. The GIS portal offers capabilities and data that can be integrated with each organization's systems, enhancing the services they provide to their customers and users makes processed data available through the GIS portal, which is compiled and updated via various projects such as photography/videography, spatial drone scanning, and other initiatives aimed at creating an advanced, highly accurate foundational map to serve Kuwait's developmental projects and empower the nation's business sector.

He emphasized the importance of these projects in supporting PACI's digital transformation efforts, particularly those related to logging building addresses. This has positively impacted the 'Kuwait Finder' app's data, strengthening the trust of its 2.5 million users and over 50 organizations that have integrated the app's interface into their own platforms.

Zain Kuwait CEO Nawaf Algharabally expressed his excitement about the collaboration with PACI, calling it a successful example of a strategic partnership between the public and private sectors. He noted that PACI's GIS data would significantly enhance Zain's Business Intelligence systems, improving service levels for Kuwait's largest customer base.

Algharabally mentioned that this partnership would pave the way for further collaborations with PACI. Zain plans to use PACI's geographic data and detailed 3D models for network planning projects, which will improve customer experience and operational efficiency, thanks to PACI's comprehensive scans of all areas in Kuwait.

He affirmed Zain's commitment to leveraging strategic partnerships with major public and private sector organizations to achieve full digital transformation and enhance the company's service offerings. The company strives to exceed customer expectations and deliver world-class services to the biggest family of subscribers in Kuwait.

The signing ceremony also included discussions on future collaborations between Zain and PACI in a number of other related areas to deliver enhanced services to citizens and residents in Kuwait

Perhaps, some were surprised by this move; because they did not know who is Sheikh Mishal Al-Ahmad whose words match his action. Your Highness, you lead by example as you appointed an appropriate person to the Crown Prince position, in addition to the premiership of the Council of Ministers or any major position. You chose what is best for Kuwait and its future.

Kuwait has started to witness the fruits of these measures. Today, there are no people milking the State and sucking its blood as it happened in the past. They worked with all their might to keep it backward, so that they would have the pleasure of continuing to shackle the people through laws that served only their interests.

Today, these people are wondering: What is next? They bet that those quivering ran out of arrows. Thus, they sharp-ened their teeth and knives, but they lost their bet even before it began.

Therefore, we say to them: Kuwait has witnessed and will continue to witness many things, as long as "good is upon us." A good indicator of this is the announcement of major projects free of corruption.

These projects will be implemented through the government's agreement with countries or large companies. No local agent shall milk it and change its value several times, Minister of Justice and Minister of Endowments and Islamic Affairs Dr. Mohammad Al-Wasmi reiterated Thursday Kuwait's keenness to upgrade the judicial system to keep pace global changes.

He made this statement to KUNA after chairing the plenary session of the 12th edition of the St. Petersburg International Legal Forum hosted by Russia during the period June 26-28.

Al-Wasmi stressed the importance of Kuwait's participation in the three-day forum which discusses a wide range of key topics related to the judicial system, new jurisprudence issues and latest legislative updates as well as the use of technology to modernize the judicial system.

Also, today, there is nothing to protect those who spread rumors or anyone who dares to harm the authority of the Amir in any way. This is due to the fact that accountability is the theme that spares no one; even those in the ruling house and even from some of the adventurers within it, when people imagined that every influential person was the ruler. All this has ended.

Here are the doors of the offices of ministers opening to the people, even the doors of senior officials. The people are certain that once the government announces that the unemployment rate will be zero in the near future, they are confident that any official will not fail to implement your directives, especially since you promised to monitor all officials. The people are standing in front of you. They believe that you will do them justice.

All these achievements will be written in history. When I told you, Your Highness, I wish I was younger so that I could work with more vigor for the sake of Kuwait; the people are convinced that life is not about the number of years, but the achievements. May Almighty Allah bless your life and this tremendous effort. Today, the people feel that they are in a fortified State, that the birth of the second Kuwaiti State has begun, and that your blessed tears were assets from which your people draw strength and determina-tion to build the best leadership. Originating from a proposal by the late Amir Sheikh Jaber Al-Ahmad in 2009, the GCC railway project concept was approved and subsequently underwent feasibility studies to ensure alignment across participating Gulf countries.

Initially overseen by the Partnership Authority under the Ministry of Transport, a feasibility study was conducted in 2012, updated in 2016, and included specifications aimed at ensuring compatibility and non-conflict during implementation.

The railway route spans 2,177 kilometers from Kuwait to Muscat, passing through all Gulf Cooperation Council nations.

The initial phase, approved by the Municipal Council on January 15, 2021, spans 265 kilometers in Kuwait, divided into two segments for expedited implementation.

The first segment covers 111 kilometers from Nuwaiseeb to Shaddadiya, southwest of Kuwait Airport T2, featuring four main passenger stations and facilities for maintenance and freight handling.

Passenger trains will operate at speeds up to 200 kilome-ters per hour, while freight trains will run at 120 kilometers per hour, powered by diesel, with a 200-meter right-of-way.

Drone strike kills 5 Germany's far-right party opens confab

BERLIN, June 29, (AP): The far-right Alternative for Germany opened a convention Saturday after a strong performance in the recent European election, as opponents held large-scale protests and some demonstrators tried to block roads or clashed with police.

Alternative for Germany, or AfD, took 15.9% of the vote to finish second in the European Parliament election on June 9, despite a series of scandals and setbacks in recent months. A particularly strong showing in the formerly communist east has bolstered its hopes of emerging as the strongest party in three state elections in that region in September.

At the regular two-day convention in the western city of Essen, co-leaders Alice Weidel and Tino Chrupalla are expected to seek another term in office.

A heavy police presence was in place in the city, where local authorities had tried to find a way to prevent the AfD event but lost their case in court. Up to 100,000 people in total were expected at a string of counterdemonstrations and other events over the weekend, German news agency dpa reported. On Friday evening, some 5,000 people participated in a peaceful anti-AfD rave titled

There were also incidents in which masked demonstrators attacked officers, according to police, who reported "several" arrests.

Protesters staged sit-ins on streets and crossings near the convention hall. Several AfD lawmakers said they had been picked up by police from their hotel and escorted to the venue, while other delegates were able to walk there without problems, dpa reported.

'5 dead in drone strike': A Ukrainian drone strike killed at least five people in Russia's Kursk region, local officials said Saturday, while rescuers in the Ukrainian city of Dnipro dug through rubble after a Russian attack ripped through a nine-story residential building, leaving one dead.

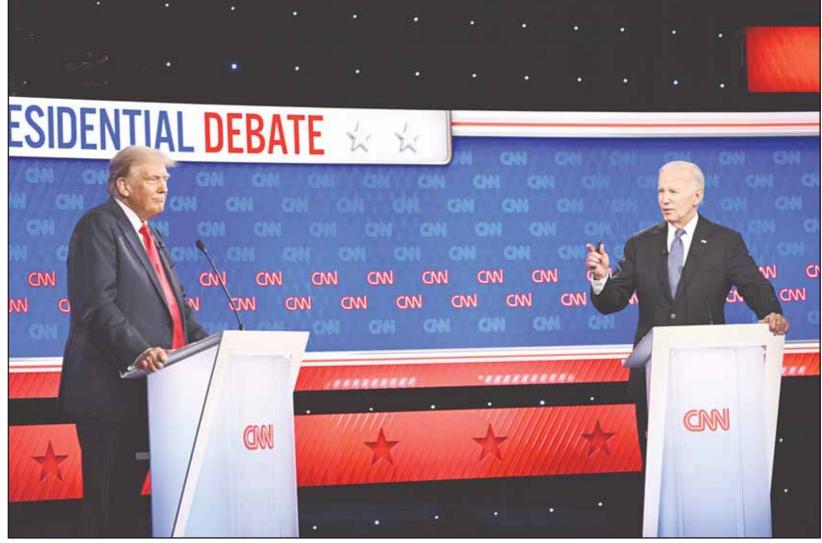

Two children were among the victims of the Ukranian attack in the village of Gorodishche on the Russian-Ukrainian border, Gov. Alexey Smirnov said on social media.

In Dnipro, at least one person died and 12 were injured, including a 7-month-old girl, after a Russian strike destroyed the top four floors of the apartment bloc Friday evening, regional head Serhii Lysak said.

The attacks came as Russia continues to stretch out Ukrainian forces in several areas along the 1,000-kilometer (600-mile) front. Moscow has stepped up airstrikes in a bid to drain Ukraine's resources, often targeting energy facilities and other vital infrastructure.

Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy said the country had lost about 80% of its thermal power and one-third of its hydroelectric power in Russian strikes.

WASHINGTON, June 29, (AP): US President Joe Biden worked forcefully Friday to quell Democratic anxieties over his unsteady showing in his debate with former President Donald Trump, as elected members of his party closed ranks around him in an effort to shut down talk of replacing him atop the ticket.

Biden's halting delivery and meandering comments, particularly early in the debate, fueled concerns from even members of his own party that at age 81 he's not up for the task of leading the country for another four years. It created a crisis moment for Biden's campaign and his presidency, as members of his party flirted with potential replacements, and donors and supporters couldn't contain their concern about his showing against Trump.

Biden appeared to acknowledge and surrogates on board. Democratic lawmakers on Friday acknowledged Biden's poor showing, but tried to stop talk of replacing him as their standardbearer, and instead shift the focus to Trump's attacks and falsehoods.

"Well, the president didn't have a good night, but neither did Donald Trump with lie after lie and his dark vision for America," North Carolina Gov. Roy Cooper told The Associated Press on Friday, hours before he introduced the president in Raleigh. "We cannot send Donald Trump back to the White House. He's an existential threat to our nation.

CHESAPEAKE, Virginia: Former US president Donald Trump gloated Friday over President Joe Biden's often halting performance at the first debate ahead of the November election, saying Democrats have no better choices while calling the Democratic incumbent "the most incompetent president" in US history.

Trump spoke to thousands of supporters Friday at a rally in Chesapeake, Virginia, a day after Biden's disappointing performance sparked concerns among his allies and other Democrats who were hoping for a more vigorous candidate to secure and improve his chances at reelection. Biden repeatedly stumbled, paused and could not complete sentences, prompting some people to wonder whether they could replace him ahead of November.

10 Ukrainians return to Kyiv: Ten Ukrainians who had been held prisoner for years were released from Russian captivity Friday with the mediation of the Vatican, Ukraine President Volodymyr Zelenskyy said.

Part of the group arrived overnight by helicopter at Kyiv International Airport, which has been closed since Russia launched its invasion of Ukraine. It was the first time in over two years the airport received passengers. The rest of the group arrived by bus.

Some of the released civilians had been captured before Russia's invasion. It's a rare occasion when people detained after 2014, when Russia illegally annexed the Ukrainian peninsula of Crimea, were released.

Among the freed was Nariman Dzhelyal, deputy head of the Mejlis, a representative body of Crimean Tatars that was relocated to Kyiv after Russia seized the peninsula. He was taken from Crimea, where he lived despite the annexation, one year before the war.

Princess Anne leaves hospital: Princess Anne has left the hospital and returned to her southwestern England estate after an accident thought to involve a horse left her with a concussion.

The king's 73-year-old sister had been to Southmead Hospital as a precautionary measure and is expected to make a full recovery after she was injured Sunday while walking at her Gatcombe Park estate. Her husband, Vice Admiral Sir Tim Laurence, applauded the doctors and nurses for their care in a statement Friday.

"I would like to extend my warmest thanks to all the team at Southmead Hospital for their care, expertise and kindness during my wife's short stay," Laurence said. The cause of Anne's injuries wasn't clear, but doctors said her injuries were consistent with an impact from a horse's head or legs.

Episode a 'stitch-up' – Farage: Anti-immigration British politician Nigel Farage on Friday criticized a worker for his Reform UK party who suggested migrants crossing the English Channel in boats should be used for "target practice."

But Farage later suggested that the episode had been a "stitch-up" by Reform's opponents.

Party activist Andrew Parker was heard suggesting army recruits with guns should be posted to "just shoot" migrants landing on beaches, in recordings made by an undercover reporter from Channel 4. He also used a racial slur about Prime Minister Rishi Sunak, who is of Indian descent.

4 dead in crash on Long Island: A minivan slammed into a Long Island nail salon Friday, killing four and injuring nine people inside the business at the time, a Suffolk County fire official said. The vehicle came to a stop at the back of the Hawaii Nail & Spa store in Deer Park about 4:40 p.m.

"There were people trapped," assistant Chief Dominic Albanese of the Deer Park Fire Department told reporters at the scene. "We extricated them and transported them to area hospitals."

The driver was semiconscious and taken to a hospital, Albanese said.

It was not immediately clear whether the crash was accidental or intentional, officials said. Suffolk County Police Department major case unit detectives were investigating, a police spokesperson said.

Photos from the scene showed a gaping hole in the storefront, which is in a strip mall.

Eric Perez told Newsday he was loading groceries into his car across from the accident scene when he heard a speeding car and

A group of guards making up the Department of Corrections Emergency Response Team was sweeping one of the housing units for contraband on Dec 8, 2023, when Othel Moore Jr., 38, was pepper sprayed twice, then put in a spit hood, leg wrap and restraint chair, according to a news release from Cole County Prosecuting Attorney Locke Thompson.

Venezuelans testify Gen wanted to take over as prez - Arce

LA PAZ, Bolivia, June 29, (AP): Bolivian President Luis Arce said Friday a former general planned to "take over" the government and become president in a failed coup, and he denied that the Andean nation was in an economic crisis.

In an interview with The Associated Press, the embattled leader denied once again that Wednesday's attack on the government palace was a "self-coup' designed to garner him political points.

"I didn't escape. I stayed to defend democracy," Arce said.

Arce washed his hands of claims by relatives of the 21 people detained by the government that they were innocent of attempting a coup and had been tricked by ex-Gen Juan Jose Zúñiga.

"It's a problem of those who were involved, it's not the government's problem," Arce told Arce said also his government has been "politically attacked" by his one-time ally turned rival, former president Evo Morales, saying the infighting has snarled legislative activities and hamstrung his government confronting economic problems.

Zúñiga

Despite that, he said, Bolivia's economy is growing and his administration is working to "diversify" means of producing, investing in things like lithium and industrializing. Bolivia has the largest reserves of lithium - a metal known as "white gold" and considered essential in the green transition - in the world that has gone largely untapped, in part due to government policy.

Action

Arce said the government "has taken action" to address intermittent gasoline and dollar shortages and other hurdles ailing the South American nation's economy

"Bolivia has an economy that's growing. An econ-omy in crisis doesn't grow," he said.

He said it was "completely normal" for Bolivians to run to stockpile food in supermarkets and make a run on ATMs upon seeing an emerging coup in the capital, instead of following his call to take to the streets in support of the government.

He said Bolivians were traumatized by the political turmoil in 2019 that led Morales to resign as president and flee and also caused 37 deaths.

"Where there is a political situation, this rupture, a coup d'état, of course people will be scared that there won't be food ... so they'll go get money to go stock up," Arce said.

He added that the government was investigating if the attack was organized by the country's political opposition. That same day, Arce's governmental minister, Eduardo del Castillo, said the government claimed that there were "snipers who did not arrive in time to the Murillo square" where the coup was staged.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina: Frustrated by the limits of the laboriously slow International Criminal Court and determined that the security officers who allegedly killed their loved ones not enjoy absolute impunity, Venezuelans have brought their crimes-againsthumanity case to a federal court 3,000 miles from home - in Argentina. In a first for Venezuela under the repressive rule of President Nicolás Maduro, a federal court in Buenos Aires concluded two days of testimony from Venezuelan victims on Friday as part of an investigation into probable human rights abuses they claim were committed by security forces in 2014, the year after Maduro took power. Earlier in the year, Argentine prosecutors moved to revive a criminal complaint lodged in 2023 by the Clooney Foundation for Justice on behalf of survivors and the family members of those killed in what lawyers called a "systematic plan" by the state to crush dissent. Prosecutors declared that the crimes committed by high-ranking members of the Venezuelan National Guard were of "extreme seriousness" and required an immediate investigation.

Indian military tank sinks while crossing river in region bordering China, killing 5 soldiers

Five Indian soldiers were killed when a military tank they were travelling in sank while crossing a river in the remote region of Ladakh that borders China, officials said Saturday.

The tank sank early Saturday due to sudden increase in the water levels of Shyok River during a military training activity, according to an Indian army command center statement. It said the accident took place in Saser Brangsa near the Line of Actual Control that divides India and China in the Ladakh region. Defense Minister Rajnath Singh called it an "unfortunate accident."

Buenrostro, who served for more than two decades in government tax, treasury and economic agencies, was described by the future president as an "incorruptible woman" with 28 years of experience in public administration.

David Kershenobich, a renowned researcher, will be the next secretary of health. Jesús Antonio Esteva Medina, secretary of infrastructure of Mexico City, will be in charge of the department of communications and transportation.

Edna Elena Vega Rangel, who also previously worked for the Mexico City government, will head the secretary of agrarian, territorial, and urban development.

The day after the June 2 election, Sheinbaum confirmed that Finance Minister Rogelio Ramírez de la O had accepted to continue in his role, in an effort to calm investors after the country faced a sudden meltdown in the stock and currency markets.

'Parliament to open July 18': South African President Cyril Ramaphosa said Friday that Parliament will open for its next term on July 18 as he remains locked in negotiations with other parties to form a Cabinet well before then amid rifts in the new governing coalition.

The talks to seal the final details of a multi-party government and appoint a Cabinet have been going on for two weeks and have been marked by disagreements between Ramaphosa's African National Congress and the Democratic Alliance, the second biggest party, over how to divide up ministerial positions and portfolios.

Correspondence between the two former political foes has been leaked, showing the tensions.

In one of the letters, Ramaphosa wrote to DA leader John Steenhuisen accusing his party of "moving the goalposts" by increasing its demand from six Cabinet positions to eight, and thereby jeopardizing the coali-tion agreement. The DA says the ANC had reneged on a promise to allow it to take control of the important Department of Trade and Industry.

Ramaphosa and Steenhuisen have also had face-to-face meetings in recent days. The issues underline the warnings from analysts that a coalition bringing the ANC and DA together to govern Africa's most industrialized country would be complicated. The ANC had been the ruling party and the DA the main opposition and its fiercest critic for more than 20 years before the May 29 election that created an unprecedented situation for South African politics. They have starkly different ideologies.

The ANC lost its dominance and the parliamentary majority it had held ever since the end of the apartheid system of white minority rule in 1994 in last month's election and has been forced to share power for the first time. It won 40% of the vote and the DA 21%. (AP)

MANILA, Philippines: Philippine troops killed at least 10 suspected communist guerrillas in a clash in a remote northern area in the latest blow to a decades-old insurgency that has weakened considerably, with only about a thousand guerrillas remaining, military and security officials said Friday.

Army troops caught up with about 20 New People's Army guerrillas who were withdrawing from an earlier clash with government forces last week, sparking a firefight Wednesday that killed 10 rebels, including three commanders, near a village in Panis to develop the interoperability between the three armed forces so that they can fight better as a cohesive fighting force.

Such exercises also carry the risk of increasing tensions, with China regularly denouncing drills in what it considers its sphere of influence, and North Korea already slamming the arrival of the USS Theodore Roosevelt carrier group in the port of Busan home to South Korea's navy headquarters and its Gimhae Air Base - in preparation for Freedom Edge as "provocative" and "dangerous."

earmarked for key development initiatives such as global food security, environmental protection, climate projects, and vital infrastructure. Specifically, loans totaling $487.5 million will be provided to the public sectors of eleven countries --

Bangladesh: $36 million, Bhutan: $50 million, China: $56.5 million, Guinea-Bissau: $15 million, India: $100 million, Lesotho: $56 million, Morocco: $100 million, Rwanda: $20 million, Somalia: $36 million, Tanzania: $50 million and Turkey: $20 million.

Additionally, the ministers decided to extend loans to the private sector in various countries. For instance, Bosnia and Herzegovina will receive 12.5 million Euros (approximately $13.35 million) to support small and medium-sized enterprises, including those led by women.

This move underscores the OPEC Fund's ongoing commitment to fostering sustainable development and supporting economic growth across its member states and beyond

Boursa Kuwait sees modest recovery on final trading day

Stock exchange market value drops by KD 387 mln

KUWAIT CITY, June 29: By the end of the week, the market value of the Kuwait Stock Exchange fell sharply by 387 million dinars to 41.173 billion dinars, down from approximately 41.558 billion dinars, reports Al-Sevassah daily.

This decline was driven by selling pressures that dominated the movements of the main indicators. The Premier Market Index closed the week at 7,576.25 points, marking a 1.01% decrease from the previous week, with a loss of 77.33 points. Similarly, the General Market Index also decreased by 1.01% ending at 6,967.1 points after a loss of 71.38 points. The Main Market Index concludKuwait's struggles with high borrowing costs

GCC real estate sector faces challenges and opportunities

KUWAIT CITY, June 29: The real estate sector in the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) countries is navigating various challenges and opportunities as it strives to attract foreign investment and achieve growth potential, reports Al-Qabas daily. The following is the overview of the current landscape across some of the key GCC nations: Kuwait's real estate sector faced considerable challenges in 2023, marked by high borrowing costs and slow reforms. Transaction volumes saw a notable decline across residential and commercial sectors, with both sales and renting levels of activity across all sectors.

Following volatility around the 2022 FIFA World Cup, Qatar's real estate market has stabilized, showing signs of recovery in early 2024. Transaction volumes and values have seen positive growth, indicating a more stable and attractive environment.

Bahrain's real estate market continues to perform steadily, driven by strategic buyers focusing on mid-range properties and an increasing demand for luxury waterfront homes. This stability supports ongoing growth in the sector.

After facing challenges during and immediately after the COVID-19 pandemic, Oman is experiencing renewed interest in its real estate potential. New projects are attracting both residents and investors, signaling a positive outlook

OAPEC advances sustainable fuel production

Secretary General of Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries (OAPEC) Jamal Al-Loughani affirmed Thursday the importance of cooperating with countries that have great expertise operating with countries that have great expertise in energy to reduce carbon emission. This came in Al-Loughani's statement to KUNA at the end of the Symposium on pathways to re-duce carbon emission in petroleum downstream industries, organized by OPAEC in collaboration with Saudi Ministry of Energy and Japan Coop-eration Center for Petroleum and Sustainable En-ergy (LCCP) in Biyadh ergy (JCCP) in Riyadh. Al-Loughani said that such seminars are an opportunity to exchange ideas and recommendations and present innovative solutions that contribute to reducing carbon emissions for the downstream petroleum industries, in addition to enhancing cooperation between participating institutions and keep pace with global trends towards climate change. The symposium held discussion that explored options for reducing carbon emissions in the petroleum industries and reviewed projects being implemented to enhance the role of the petroleum industry in the field of producing sustainable, lowcarbon fuels, improving energy efficiency, as well as opportunities for using renewable energy and hydrogen. # Nation looks to privatize oil services

Kuwait proposes new sovereign wealth funds for mega projects

By Kamel Al-Harami Independent Oil Analyst

The time has come to focus on the upcoming mega projects that need funds separate from our annual fiscal budget. This requires creating dedicated funds to finance our future domestic infrastructure projects.

Our new sovereign wealth funds must be made similar to that of Singapore's GIC and Te-masek and Abu Dhabi's Al-Mubadala funds. Even though Kuwait's sovereign wealth fund is the oldest, dating back to the mid-1950s, it is now necessary to separate huge projects in the annual budget. Previously, Kuwait relied on its own income, and resources were sufficient. However, with our current deficits in our oil income, it has become necessary to free the budget for running our daily operations.

We believe the funds should come from two main sources. Firstly, they should be generated through the privatization of noncore oil companies, specifically those involved in service sectors that do not impact the nation's wealth, crude oil production, or any volume-related commitments. This approach aims to facilitate and support the development of new mega projects using internal resources. Secondly, the funds must come from within the state by privatizing certain oil service companies that do not align with our core business activities. It is equally important to adhere to our constitution, ensuring clarity and lack of ambiguity. The funds must come exclusively from the sale of state-owned assets. We stress that only non-core oil services should be considered for privatization, similar to the privately-owned gas stations for cars. We have to expand such non-core activities including services like fueling services at the airport, home delivery of gas cylinders, and operations at the gas factory. This also encompasses the administrative functions of the Kuwait Oil Tanker Company's marine oil tanker agency, focusing on paperwork, documentation, and human resources management. Another example is the Kuwait Lube Oil Company, which can be sold to existing domestic companies. These small non-core entities are already being transferred between hands swiftly and with minimal costs and administrative activities. Private companies can efficiently manage these transitions, ensuring completion within less than a year.

Another significant non-core activity that has been operating at a loss for many years is the Kuwait Foreign Oil Investments Company. It is imperative to sell this entity immediately, without hesitation, to prevent further financial losses.

We now shift focus to the large oil servicing companies involved in refining, transportation, and petrochemical sectors, which were initially semi-private or fully privately owned. These include the Kuwait National Petroleum Company, Kuwait Oil Tankers Company, and Petrochemical Industries Company. These entities possess extensive experience and familiarity with the private sector.

These companies should be sold, and the cash generated should be used to form the foundation of using Kuwait's sovereign wealth fund for funding our mega projects. These projects include the development of Mubarak Port, proposed railway stations, metro expansions, and other domestic initiatives such as renewable energy-based electricity generation. The funds should come from our sovereign foreign investments and the proceeds from the sale of oil servicing companies, estimated to be around $700 billion.

As the largest economy in the GCC, Saudi Arabia is actively implementing its Vision 2030 strategy, which includes ambitious goals to increase home ownership among citizens and attract international investors.

The introduction of the premium residency visa is aimed at opening the market to global investors. Despite initial gains, the real estate market is still in the early stages of this transformation.

The UAE, particularly Dubai, has shown robust activity in the real estate market, recording significant transaction volumes in the residential sector in early 2024. This momentum indicates a positive start to the year, reflecting increasindividual stocks. Among "Ma'aden" and "Bayan" experienced the largest declines and gains respectively. Gulf Bank led in trading volume with 75.79 million shares traded, while "KFH" topped in liquidity with 36.75 million dinars, despite a slight decrease of 0.56%.

Company celebrates five-decade legacy in real estate

Markaz affirms leadership in global real estate sector

KUWAIT CITY, June 29: As the global real estate landscape continues to evolve, Kuwait Financial Centre "Markaz" proudly reaffirms its prominent position as a leader in the international real estate sector. The company has executed over 95 projects worth over USD 2.3 billion since the beginning of its real estate activity spanning various markets and property types in the US and Europe. Markaz continues to demonstrate excellence in delivering value to investors through a blend of expertise, strategic partnerships, and innovative approaches.

"Our five-decade legacy positions Markaz as a trusted advisor, leveraging our global network to identify and capitalize on value-accretive opportunities," said Sami Shabshab, President of Mar-Gulf Management Inc., the international real estate arm of Markaz. "We maintain a dynamic investment strategy, constantly evaluating market trends to identify the sectors with the most compelling opportunities. We remain fundamentally optimistic on the long-term prospects of the logistics sector, even amidst a more challenging macroeconomic backdrop".

Shabshab elaborated: "The ongoing growth of e-commerce, coupled with the strategic realignment of global supply chains and the resulting surge in warehousing needs, presents a compelling investment opportunity. This confluence of trends creates a 'tripartite demand structure', characterized by robust and sustained demand, outpacing a relatively constrained supply, a dynamic that is likely to persist for the foreseeable future.

Recognizing the evolving lending environment, Markaz is strategically expanding its focus on structured debt solutions. By providing tailored financing solutions, Markaz unlocks value in complex situations, creating attractive investment opportunities previously inaccessible to traditional lenders. This approach complements Markaz's existing capabilities in acquisitions, development, and asset management, offering a comprehensive suite of real estate investment strategies.

Markaz is committed to further strengthening its network of strategic partners. These partnerships amplify expertise, unlock access to new deal flow, and enhance Markaz's ability to capitalize on emerging opportunities. Building on its successful track record, Markaz seeks to collaborate with best-in-class developers, investors, financial institutions, and government entities. Leveraging these valuable relationships, the company has gained access to prime opportunities and forged alliances that drive growth and innovation in the industry.

Over the past 12 months, the company has executed strategic real estate exits, generating positive returns for its investors amid a backdrop of global economic volatility. "Our meticulous planning, diligent execution, and unwavering focus on value maximization have resulted in solid internal rates of return (IRR) on these transactions," said Sami Shabshab. "We are proud of our ability to strategically time exits to optimize returns for our clients, as demonstrated by our recent successful exits from key industrial assets, generating a total exit value of USD 235.5 million."

Abdullatif W. Al-Nusif, Managing Director of Wealth Management & Business Development at Markaz stated: "Markaz sets itself apart with a relentless focus on client relationships and value creation. Our deep-rooted expertise in the US and European markets, bolstered by strategic alliances, allows us to navigate market fluctuations effectively and consistently deliver solid returns. The wealth management team collaborates closely with the international real estate team to identify lucrative opportunities that align with clients' goals, thereby optimizing their investment portfolios, driven by innovative investment solutions honed over fifty years. This synergy underscores Markaz's commitment to crafting tailored solutions that effectively meet client needs.'

Markaz has been active in the US real estate market since launching its first syndicated transaction there in 1977. Since 1988, Markaz has been conducting its real estate transactions through Mar-Gulf, its international real estate arm. Over these highly-active thirty-six years, Markaz has been involved in the ownership and development of real estate properties across industrial, storage, retail, residential, and office segments.

Looking ahead, Markaz remains committed to leveraging its strong network of partners and the expertise of its team to drive sustained results and innovation in the international real estate market.

With a focus on collaboration, creativity, and client-centricity, Markaz is poised to capitalize on emerging opportunities, and shape the future of global real estate.

Kuwait businesses seek fair pricing amid storage crisis

KUWAIT CITY, June 29: Business owners in Kuwait are facing significant challenges due to the acute shortage of suitable storage spaces and warehouses, exacerbated by exploitative practices that have seen rents double or more in permissible storage areas, reports Al-Qabas daily. This issue, long-standing and worsening each year, recently came to a head following the Mangaf fire incident. The infrastructure for warehouses and available land has not kept pace with the growth of Kuwait's business environment and increasing project demands.

Mohammed Jassim Al-Wazzan, Vice Chairman of the Board of Directors of Meezan Holding Company, criticized the government's response, calling for a grace period of one to two years. During this time, he suggested establishing public warehouses for essential commodities, set at reasonable prices to prevent exploitation.

Riyadh Al-Baghli, General Manager of House Living Real Estate Development Company, emphasized that the fundamental solution lies in the government's provision of new, affordable lands dedicated to warehouse use. He proposed that if direct government investment is not feasible, partnering with private companies could be a viable approach to expand storage infrastructure without burdening the state.

Omar Al Nasser, General Manager of Tawazun Real Estate Company, stressed the urgent need for storage facilities in urban areas to meet rising demand. He highlighted that current offerings in Kuwait fall short of international standards, describing existing spaces as inadequate for meeting market needs.

Fahd Al-Arbash, President of the Kuwait Federation for Restaurants, Cafes and Food Equipment, pointed out the practical difficulties faced by small business owners needing smaller storage spaces, contrasting this with the current requirement for large-scale facilities. He called for revised regulations allowing storage in investment areas under controlled conditions, advocating fair pricing to prevent exploitation.

The overall sentiment among stakeholders is clear: there is an urgent need for comprehensive reforms in Kuwait's storage policies and infrastructure development. Addressing these issues effectively could alleviate financial burdens on businesses, ensure fair pricing for consumers, and bolster the economy while enhancing regulatory oversight to prevent exploitative practices.

WB approves $750 mln loan to boost Philippine recovery

The World Bank said on Sat-urday that it has approved a 750-million-U.S. dollar loan to strengthen the Philippine economy's recovery.

The Philippines Second Sus-tainable Recovery Develop-ment Policy Loan supports re-forms that increase investment in public service sectors, attract private investment in public infrastructure, particularly in domestic shipping, promote renewable energy, protect the en-vironment and improve climate resilience World Bank Senior Economist

Ralph van Doorn said the Philippine economy remains resilient despite ongoing global and do-mestic challenges. "The reforms supported by this lending program, if implemented, will encourage private investment, in-novation, and sustained growth," he said.

Through these reforms, Van Doorn said the Philippines can transition faster to a greener economy and achieve its environmental and climate objectives.

Given the Philippines' archipe-lagic nature, he added that marine transport is critical for trade and connecting its numerous islands and destinations, enabling efficient movement of goods and products. (Xinhua)

Czech central bank again cuts a key interest rate

The Czech Republic's central bank on Thursday cut its key inter-est rate for the fifth time in a row as inflation remains low and the economy is showing signs of recovery. The cut, which had been predicted by analysts, brought the interest rate down by a half-percentage point, to 4.75%.

The bank started to trim borrowing costs by a quarter-point on Dec. 21, the first cut since June 22, 2022. Further cuts of half a percentage point each time followed on Feb. 8, March 20 and May 2. Inflation declined to 10.7% in 2023 from 15.1% in 2022, according to the Czech Statistics Office, and dropped to the bank's target of 2.0% year-on-year in February, re-maining unchanged in March. It increased to 2.9% in April before dropping to 2.6% in May. The Czech economy was up by 0.2% year-on-year in the first quarter of 2024, and increased by 0.3% compared with the last three months of the previous year, the figures released by Statistics Office on May 31 said. That came after the Czech economy contracted by 0.2% in the last three months of 2023 compared with a year earlier. Central banks around the world are leaning toward lowering borrowing costs as they judge whether toxic inflation has been sufficiently tamed. (AP)

US 'growth' for Q1 revised up slightly

WASHINGTON, June 29, (AP): The American economy expanded at a 1.4% annual pace from January through March, the slowest quarterly growth since spring 2022, the government said Thursday in a slight upgrade from its previous estimate. Consumer spending grew at just a 1.5% rate, down from an initial estimate of 2%, in a sign that high interest rates may be taking a toll on the economy.

The Commerce Department had previously estimated that the gross domestic product - the economy's total output of goods and services - advanced at a 1.3% rate last quarter.

The first quarter's GDP growth marked a sharp pullback from a strong 3.4% pace during the final three months of 2023. Still, Thursday's report showed that the January-March slowdown was caused mainly two factors - a surge in imports and a drop in business inventories - that can bounce around from quarter to quarter and don't necessarily reflect the underlying health of the economy. Imports shaved 0.82 percentage point off first-quarter growth. Lower inventories subtracted 0.42 percentage point. Picking up the slack was business investment, which the government said rose at a 4.4% annual pace last quarter, up from its previous estimate of 3.2%. Higher investment in factories and other nonresidential buildings and in software and other types of intellectual property helped boost the increase. After growing at a solid annual pace of more than 3% in the second half of 2023, consumer spending decelerated sharply last quarter. Spending on appliances, furniture and other goods fell by a 2.3% annual rate, while spending on travel, restaurant meals and other services rose at a 3.3% rate. Chris Zaccarelli, chief investment officer for the Independent Advisor Alliance, called the downshift in consumer spending "a cause for concern. Consumers account for around 70% of U.S. economic activity "The economy remained resilient in the first quarter," said Gregory Daco, chief economist at the tax and consulting firm EY. But "private-sector demand growth was cooling, led by more consumer prudence. Importantly though, the economy is not retrenching, with business investment retaining moderate momentum.<sup>2</sup>

There has been a notable increase in the cap for inclusive micro and small loans from 10 million yuan (about 1.4 million U.S. dollars) to 20 million yuan per borrower, and refinancing initiatives for agricultural and small businesses have seen interest rate reductions, further alleviating financial burdens on these crucial economic entities.

At the end of May, the outstanding inclusive micro and small loans amounted to 31.56 trillion yuan, marking a 19.3 percent year-on-year increase

In April, China set up a re-lending program worth 500 billion yuan to promote technological innovation and industrial upgrades, with 100 billion yuan specially designated to help boost the growth of tech firms.

An initial list of nearly 7,000 qualified enterprises under the program was sent to banks recently.

"We immediately reviewed the credit and business needs of relevant clients upon receiving the list," said Zhang Xiaorui, deputy head of the Shandong branch of the Industrial and Commercial Bank of China (ICBC). Despite lacking tangible assets suitable for traditional collateral, a manufacturer of high-performance engineering plastics in east China's Zhejiang Province recently secured a 2 million yuan credit line from Zhejiang E-Commerce Bank. The bank made the decision to grant the loan after using advanced data analytics to evaluate industry chain dynamics and operational risks.

According to Chen Kai, vice general manager of the bank's industry finance department, nearly 30 percent of the credit recipients were involved in pioneering scientific research and technological development.

This data-driven lending approach has been adopted by many other banks in China. The Export-Import Bank of China has used big data on trade to tailor online products for micro and small businesses engaged in international trade. The ICBC and the Bank of China have launched technology finance centers to bolster support for technology-driven SMEs.

Apart from bank loans, China also encourages SMEs to take advantage of direct financing channels, including the capital market and venture capital (VC) investment.

The government recently released mechanical company in Yantai in a string of policies to bolster VC inropean Union is escalating its scrutiny of the artificial intelligence industry, including taking a fresh look into Microsoft's multibillion-dollar partnership with OpenAI, a top EU official said Friday.

The European Commission, the bloc's executive arm, started reviewing the deal last year to see whether it broke EU merger rules but dropped it after concluding Microsoft hadn't gained control of OpenAI, Margrethe Vestager, the commission's executive vice-president for competition policy, said in a speech.

"Microsoft has invested $13 billion in OpenAI over the years," she said "But we have to make sure that partnerships like this do not become a disguise for one partner getting a controlling influence over the other.'

She signalled that the commission would take another tack to examine the deal, and the industry vestment, with specific measures to support the growth of SMEs through patent industrialization. Such equity financing is better suited to spur innovation activities during the highrisk research and development phase, said Zhou Guanping, a researcher at China Everbright Group.

The Beijing Stock Exchange, established in November 2021, is also dedicated to serving innovative antitrust rules, which target abusive behavior by companies that have a dominant market position.

The commission sent information requests in March to big AI players including Microsoft, Google, Facebook and TikTok, reviewed those replies and is "now sending a follow-up request for information on the agreement between Microsoft and OpenAI," Vestager said.

The EU wants "to understand whether certain exclusivity clauses could have a negative effect on competitors," she said.

A Microsoft spokesman said, "We appreciate the European Commission's thorough review and its conclusion that Microsoft's investment and partnership with OpenAI does not give Microsoft control over the company. We stand ready to respond to any additional questions the European Commission may have.'

OpenAI didn't respond immediately to a request for comment.

SMEs.

Among the 249 listed companies on the exchange, SMEs account for over 80 percent, underscoring the pivotal role of public equity markets in fostering innovation and expansion among SMEs. The total capitalization of the exchange has surpassed 330 billion yuan.

In addition to enhanced financing channels for SMEs, experts have also lights how European Union regulators have been pacesetters for the global push to rein in big tech companies, including the major AI players. The EU's led the field with its AI Act, which is set to take effect soon and is the world's first comprehensive set of regulations for AI.

Vestager said the bloc was also concerned about consumer choices for foundation models, which is the technology that underpins generative AI systems like chatbots.

She said EU regulators have sent information requests "to better understand the effects of Google's arrangement with Samsung" to pre-install Gemini Nano on some devices from the South Korean tech company. Gemini Nano is the smallest version of Google's Gemini AI foundation model.

"And we have a number of other preliminary antitrust investigations ongoing into various practices in AIrelated markets," she added.

called for more efforts to ensure that the financing is more sound and sustainable

Hou Liming, a researcher at the Renmin University of China, said that work should be done to further reduce the liquidity pressure of SMEs due to delinquent receivables, promote their digitalization, and launch more insurance products targeting SME risks.

Prices for physical goods actually fell 0.4% from April to May

Fed's preferred inflation gauge shows price pressures easing further

WASHINGTON, June 29, (AP): A measure of prices that is closely tracked by the Federal Reserve suggests that inflation pressures in the U.S. economy are continuing to ease.

Friday's Commerce Department report showed that consumer prices were flat from April to May, the mildest such performance in more than four years. Measured from a year earlier, prices rose 2.6% last month, slightly less than in April.

Excluding volatile food and energy prices, so-called core inflation rose 0.1% from April to May, the smallest increase since the spring of 2020, when the pandemic erupted and shut down the economy. And compared with a year earlier, core prices were up 2.6% in May, the lowest increase in more than three years. Prices for physical goods actually fell 0.4% from April to May. Gasoline prices, for example, dropped 3.4%, furniture prices 1% and the prices of recreational goods and vehicles 1.6%. On the other hand, prices for services, which include items like restaurant meals and airline fares, ticked up 0.2%.

The latest figures will likely be welcomed by the Fed's policymakers, who have said they need to feel confident that inflation is slowing sustainably toward their 2% target before they'd start cutting interest rates. Rate cuts by the Fed, which most economists think could start in September, would lead eventually to lower borrowing rates for consumers and businesses.

"If the trend we saw this month continues consistently for another two months, the Fed may finally have the confidence necessary for a rate cut in September," Olu Šonola, head of U.S. economic research at Fitch Ratings, wrote in a research note.

The Fed raised its benchmark rate 11 times in 2022 and 2023 in its drive to curb the worst streak of inflation in four decades. Inflation did cool substantially from its peak in 2022. Still, average prices remain far above where they were before the pandemic, a source of frustration for many Americans and a potential threat to President Joe Biden's reelection bid.

During Thursday night's presidential debate, Donald Trump attacked Biden's record on inflation. The presumptive Republican nominee asserted that Biden inherited low rates of inflation when he entered office in January 2021 but that prices "blew up under his leadership."

While inflation was in fact ultralow at the start of the Biden presidency, that was largely because the nation was still recovering from the brutal Covid recession, which flattened the economy. Once the economy began surging back to life with unexpected speed, causing severe shortages of goods and labor, inflation soared.

Friday's price figures added to signs that inflation pressures are continuing to ease, though more slowly than they did last year.

The Fed tends to favor the inflation gauge that the government issued Friday - the personal consumption expenditures price index - over the better-known consumer price index. The PCE index tries to account for changes in how people shop when inflation jumps. It can capture, for example, when consumers switch from pricey national brands to cheaper store brands.

Like the PCE index, the latest consumer price index showed that inflation eased in May for a second straight month. It reinforced hopes that the acceleration of prices that occurred early this year has passed.

The much higher borrowing costs that followed the Fed's rate hikes, which sent its key rate to a 23-year high, were widely expected to tip the nation into recession. Instead, the economy has kept growing, and employers have kept hiring.

Lately, though, the economy's momentum has appeared to flag, with higher rates seeming to weaken the ability of some consumers to keep spending freely. On Thursday, the government reported that the economy expanded at a 1.4% annual pace from January through March, the slowest quarterly growth since 2022. Consumer spending, the main engine of the economy, grew at a tepid 1.5% annual rate.

Friday's report also showed that consumer spending and incomes both picked up in May, encouraging signs for the economy. Adjusted for inflation, spending by consumers - the principal driver of the U.S. economy - rose 0.3% last month after having dropped 0.1% in April.

After-tax income, also adjusted for inflation, rose 0.5%. That was the biggest gain since September 2020.

Martin Mull, hip comic and actor from 'Roseanne,' dies at 80

LOS ANGELES, June 29, (AP): Martin Mull, whose droll, esoteric comedy and acting made him a hip sensation in the 1970s and later a beloved guest star on sitcoms including "Roseanne" and "Arrested Development," has died, his daughter said Friday.

Mull's daughter, TV writer and comic artist Maggie Mull, said her father died at home on Thursday after "a valiant fight against a long illness.

Mull, who was also a guitarist and painter, came to national fame with a recurring role on the Norman Lear-created satirical soap opera "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," and the starring role in its spinoff, "Fernwood Tonight."

"He was known for excelling at every creative discipline imagina-ble and also for doing Red Roof Inn commercials," Maggie Mull said in an Instagram post. "He would find that joke funny. He was never not funny. My dad will be deeply missed by his wife and daughter, by his friends and coworkers, by fellow artists and comedians and musicians, and-the sign of a truly exceptional person-by many, many dogs."

Known for his blonde hair and well-trimmed mustache. Mull was born in Chicago, raised in Ohio and Connecticut and studied art in Rhode Island and Rome.

His first foray into show business was as a songwriter, penning the 1970 semi-hit "A Girl Named Johnny Cash" for singer Jane Morgan. He would combine music and comedy in an act that he brought to hip Hollywood clubs in the 1970s.

Variety

"In 1976 I was a guitar player and sit-down comic appearing at the Roxy on the Sunset Strip when Norman Lear walked in and heard me," Mull told The Associated Press in 1980.

"He cast me as the wife beater on 'Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman.' Four months later I was spun off on my own show."

His time on the Strip was memorialized in the 1973 country rock classic "Lonesome L.A. Cowboy" where the Riders of the Purple Sage give him a shoutout along with music luminaries Kris Kristofferson and Rita Coolidge.

Sensibilities

"I know Kris and Rita and Marty Mull are hangin' at the Troubadour," the song says.

On "Fernwood Tonight" (sometimes styled as "Fernwood 2 Night"), he played Barth Gimble, the host of a local talk show in a midwestern town and twin to his "Mary Hartman" character. Fred Willard, a frequent collaborator with very similar comic sensibilities, played his sidekick. It was later revamped as "America 2 Night" and set in Southern California.

He would get to be a real talk show host as a substitute for Johnny Carson on "The Tonight Show.'

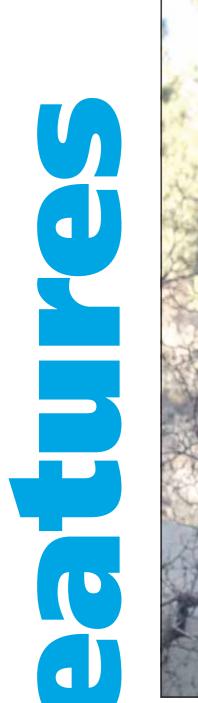

Mull often played slightly sleazy, somewhat slimy and often smarmy characters as he did as Teri Garr's boss and Michael Keaton's foe in 1983's "Mr. Mom." He played Colonel Mustard in the 1985 movie adaptation of the board game "Clue," which, like many things Mull appeared in, has become a cult classic.

The 1980s also brought what many thought was his best work, "A History of White People in America," a mockumentary that first aired on Cinemax. Mull co-created the show and starred as a "60 Minutes" style investigative reporter investigating all things milquetoast and mundane. Willard was again a co-star.

He wrote and starred in 1988's "Rented Lips" alongside Robert Downey Jr., whose father, Robert Sr., directed.

His co-star Jennifer Tilly said in an X post Friday that Mull was 'such a witty charismatic and kind person.'

In the 1990s he was best known for his recurring role on several seasons on "Roseanne," in which he played a warmer, less sleazy boss to the title character, an openly gay man whose partner was played by Willard, who died in 2020.

SANTA FE, N.M.: A court ruling on Friday put an involuntary manslaughter case against Alec Baldwin on track for trial in early July as a judge denied a request to dismiss the case on complaints that key evidence was damaged by the FBI during forensic testing.

Judge Mary Marlowe Sommer sided with prosecutors in rejecting a motion to dismiss the case. Defense attorneys had argued that the gun in the fatal shooting was heavily damaged during FBI forensic testing before it could be examined for possible modifications or problems that might exonerate the actor-producer.

The ruling removes one of the last hurdles before prosecutors can bring the case to trial with jury selection scheduled for July 9 in Santa Fe.

At trial, attorneys plan to call on witnesses from a court-approved list of more than 60 people. They include film director Joel Souza, who was wounded in the shooting as well as assistant director Dave Halls, who earlier pleaded no contest to negligent use of a deadly weapon, and an array of first responders, investigators, firearms experts and close-range witnesses to the shooting.

Baldwin isn't listed but has the right to testify at his own trial.

During a rehearsal on the set of the Western film "Rust" in 2021, Baldwin pointed a gun at cinematographer Halyna Hutchins when the revolver went off, killing her and injuring director Souza as the bullet became lodged in his shoulder. Baldwin has maintained that he pulled back the gun's hammer but not the trigger and has pleaded not guilty.

The FBI conducted an accidental discharge test on the gun by striking it from several angles with a rawhide mallet, eventually breaking the gun. Prosecutors plan to present evidence at trial that they say shows the firearm "could not have fired absent a pull of the trigger" and was working properly before the shooting.

Baldwin has twice been charged in Hutchins' death. Prosecutors dismissed an earlier charge, then refiled it after receiving a new analysis of the revolver that Baldwin pointed at Hutchins. (AP)

Costner delivers a spectacularly unsubtle epic

'Horizon,' bold overstuffed Western saga

By Mark Kennedy

There's a scene deep into Kevin Costner's new Western when he and a woman are fleeing bad guys on horseback. They pause at a jaw-dropping vista and he turns to her: "You just gotta keep going," he tells her.

That should be the slogan of "Horizon: An American Saga - Chapter 1," the initial three-hour salvo in what could morph into a four-part epic about the West that could tax even the biggest cowboy fan.

Give Costner - co-writer, director, producer - his due. This is a labor of love he's been thinking about since the 1980s and he has skin in the game: He took out a mortgage on his 10-acre home in Santa Barbara, California. Well, one of his homes, at least. He's not a total idiot.

"Chapter 1" - "Chapter 2" is to be released in August and parts three and four depend on if folks keep going - is a sprawling, often unwieldy placesetter, introducing dozens of characters in different parts of the West who, one has to assume, will interact at some point. If they survive, that is.

It's a spectacularly unsubtle movie, from the opening moment when a group of ants on a hill of dirt are crushed by a surveyor's wooden stake. If there's any doubt what we must feel, listen to John Debney's ponderous, pretentious score, with its criminal overuse of cellos.

Costner scrambles the plot - crafted by him and Jon Baird - almost immediately by offering a climactic battle scene within the first half hour, one in which a small white settlement in Arizona's San Pedro Valley (thanks, southern Utah!) is sneak-attacked by Apaches during an innocent dance.

It's a slaughter and it lasts way too long - savagery on one side, noble victims on the other. Mothers are struck by arrows while carrying their babes, unarmed musicians killed without a thought. "Ready son?" asks a dad to his teenage son, handing him a rifle and facing certain death. "I think so, dad," comes the plucky reply. In the aftermath, a mother cradles the corpse of her son and talks to it.

This slaughter shoots off a few story strands some survivors (like spunky new widow Sienna Miller and her daughter) find shelter at a US Army camp led by an achingly honorable lieutenant, played by Sam Worthington. Another story arc sees bounty hunters go in search of the Apaches who attacked the settlement, seeking profit and revenge.

"Horizon" also shows the internal divisions within the Apaches, with the chief's hothead son and new father (Owen Crow Shoe) ready to keep fighting. "Their sons will hunt you," the chief warns. "I won't sing for your victory today." We learn that the white settlement violated agreements meant to calm the West.

Savager

Costner's universe is both fatalistic and inevitable. Both sides may be right and wrong, but there will always be another round of savagery. "There's no one on Earth going to stop these wagons from coming," an exasperated Army officer says at one point.

After an hour, Costner himself arrives, a quiet, strong loner who enters a Wyoming Territory settlement with the hope of a nice drink and some lady company and yet who leaves on the run, protecting a sex worker (Abbey Lee) and a boy in her care from psychotic horsemen who wish them harm.

Two hours into the movie comes another whole set of characters, with Costner's menu now completely out of whack. It's a wagon train led by Luke Wilson (never a cowboy, ever) who is facing some class issues - a well-off, oblivious couple are among the working-class muscle - and some Peeping Toms. It's all too much, but add to it a dash of anti-Chinese xenophobia, some budding romances and horrific scalping.

Director of photography J. Michael Muro doesn't romanticize anything, grinding the action in the smoke, heat and chicken-pecked dust of the West, so much so that you might taste grit in your teeth at some points. It helps that Costner has positioned everyone on the top of a picturesque hillside, showing off their profiles.

Part of the problem of "Chapter 1" is that in addition to overstuffing it with too many characters, the editing is pretty bad. Viewers will struggle with some violent cuts in which Costner has jumped the action forward months within the same chapter without any clues.

Yet Costner is still an impressive director with a eye for the natural beauty of the American West and a soft spot for loners. Yes, "Horizon: An American Saga - Chapter 1" is a huge swing that cannot really stand on its own. But we owe it to him to ride beside him a little more. Let's see if he can stick the landing.

"Horizon: An American Saga - Chapter 1," a Warner Bros. release in theaters Friday, is rated R for "violence and some nudity and sexuality." Running time: 180 minutes. One and a half stars out of four.

LOS ANGELES: After nearly 30 years of fits and starts, the fourth Beverly Hills Cop movie is finally upon us. Eddie Murphy reprises his role as Axel Foley in "Beverly Hills Cop: Axel F," which debuts on Netflix on Wednesday. Judge Reinhold and John Ashton also return but they get some fresh blood in a detective played by Joseph Gordon-Levitt and Captain (Kevin Bacon). Taylour Paige also joins the ensemble as Axel's daughter. The original "Beverly Hills Cop" which launched Murphy to stardom in 1984 is also streaming on Netflix now.

Meanwhile, Emma Roberts is "living her best Florida life" when she remembers her lifetime dream of being an astronaut in "Space Cadet." Unbeknownst to her, a friend ("Hacks" castmate Poppy Liu) embellishes her resume and she's accepted into a competitive NASA training program. It aspires to be a kind of "Legally Blonde" meets "Private Benjamin" (who wouldn't dream of such heights) and will be available to stream on Prime Video starting Thursday. (AP)

York on Friday seeking the return of his handwritten notes and song lyrics from the band's hit "Hotel California" album.

The civil complaint filed in Manhattan federal court comes after prosecutors in March abruptly dropped criminal charges midway through a trial against three collectibles experts accused of scheming to sell the documents.

The Eagles co-founder has maintained the pages were stolen and had vowed to pursue a lawsuit when the criminal case was dropped against rare books dealer Glenn Horowitz, former Rock & Roll Hall of Fame curator Craig Inciardi and rock memorabilia seller Edward Kosinski.

"Hotel California," released by the Eagles in 1977, is the third-biggest selling album of all time in the US.

"These 100 pages of personal lyric sheets belong to Mr. Henley and his family, and he has never authorized defendants or anyone else to peddle them for profit," Daniel Petrocelli, Henley's lawyer, said in an emailed statement Friday. According to the lawsuit, the handwritten pages remain in the custody of Manhattan District Attorney Alvin Bragg's office, which declined to comment Friday on the litigation.

Lawyers for Kosinski and Inciardi dismissed the legal action as baseless, noting the criminal case was dropped after it was determined that Henley misled prosecutors by withholding critical information. (AP)

Harmon making big moves as producer

BURBANK, Calif., June 29, (AP): If Dionne Harmon never found an old script on New Edition's biopic, the R&B group's story might still be sitting on a shelf instead of becoming a highly-rated miniseries for BET

Same can be said for other projects like "The Bobby Brown Story" and the Soul Train-inspired series "American Soul." She might not have a household name, but she's known in Hollywood for working on big projects and major events including the Oscars, Emmys and Golden Globes. Harmon has worked on multiple Super Bowl halftime shows, becoming the first Black woman to produce the show

Next up, she'll be a producer at the BET Awards on Sunday at 8 p.m. Eastern. The show will air live from the Peacock Theater in Los Angeles.

The Emmy winner is one of the few Black women to hold a top position in the entertainment industry. She is president of Jesse Collins Entertainment, one of television's most requested production companies. Harmon reports directly to CEO Jesse Collins, who is her fiancé. "I've been grinding to build my toolbox just to be ready for these moments," said Harmon, a Harvard University graduate who has worked at JCE since 2012.

She started at JCE as an assistant, a position she was reluctant to take until Collins introduced her to other employees who had gradually rose into high-ranking positions at the company

Harmon accepted the job. Collins guaranteed he'd teach her everything he knew about the business, allowing her to shadow him in meetings and on phone calls.

'This is a place where you put your roots in and they grow," she said. "On the surface, it looked like a step backwards. I had to talk down my ego, which didn't want me to take that step. ... But this was the best decision I've ever made.

Success

Harmon's big break came through the 2017 project "The New Edition Story."

After seeing the tremendous success of TLC's bi-opic "CrazySexyCool: The TLC Story" in 2013, she realized there were more opportunities to explore.

Harmon found an old script about New Edition's story written by Abdul Williams that had been sitting around for years, took it to Collins and convinced him to pitch the idea to Stephen Hill, BET's president of programming at the time. The series became a massive hit on the network, but she didn't receive producer credits.

However, Harmon did well enough to earn a promotion to director of development - without a staff that resulted into more projects. She led the reworked format for "Hip Hop Squares" that evolved into the creation of three spin-off shows such as CMT's "Nashville Squares," BET's "Celebrity Squares" and "Hollywood Squares" for CBS with Drew Barrymore. She also played a key role in the development and production of the critically acclaimed competition show "Rhythm + Flow" on Netflix, which has now expanded to France, Italy and Brazil.

Erykah Badu said Harmon was instrumental in her return for three consecutive years as nost an roaucei of the Soul Train Awards starting in 2015. The singer called Harmon a "no-nonsense, deliberate producer." Under her leadership, Harmon helped JCE's staff grow from 11 full-time employees to 25. She also spearheaded the company's efforts to work directly with brands on content production on large-scale events with Nike, Ford, Pepsi and TikTok. "She's very passionate, creative and knows how to navigate a very complicated world known as Holly-wood," Collins said. "She really leads with integrity first. That has really helped her grow. Once you build a reputation of trust and you're creative, all the doors open up for you."

'Disciple' celebrates musician-actor-activist's legacy

Van Zandt reflects on rock star life

NEW YORK, June 29, (AP): Steve Van Zandt still looks every bit the rock star.

But underneath his purple head-scarf, paisley shirt and snakeskin boots, Van Zandt says he still hates being the center of attention.

"I'm a bit of a contradiction and paradox," he says, sheepishly laughing after an interviewer notes the musician-actor-activist might be in the wrong lines of work.

Perhaps it should be no surprise that Van Zandt, 73, had to be coaxed into participating in a documentary about his remarkable life and career. The result is "Stevie Van Zandt: Disciple" - which airs on HBO and streams on Max - and covers not only s a guitar-jamming singer songwriter, but also as a music producer, playing Silvio Dante on "The Sopranos," and his lesser-known roles as an activist, radio host, music educator, and entrepreneur. The man affectionately called "Little Steven" by fans says he feels mostly gratitude about the film. "It's an honor that somebody cared enough about my life to make a movie about it. And I'm happy that the work is going to be seen," Van Zandt told The Associated Press. " My other emotion is anxiety ... it's a little embarrassing and awkward." Director Bill Teck, a lifelong fan of Van Zandt's music, says he started inquiring about a documentary on his life and career in 2006. but received a hard no. After following up every few years, Van Zandt finally agreed in 2018, but he didn't even want to be interviewed. Teck eventually convinced him audiences wanted to hear Van Zandt's version of how his career in rock evolved starting with his teen years playing in New Jersey bands, where he met his lifelong friend and collaborator, Bruce Springsteen.

He recalled the impact bands like the Beatles and Rolling Stones had on him and other Jersey musicians that encouraged them to keep perform-ing. "Suddenly we had a place. We had a little hope," he says.

The film includes interviews with rock legends - Paul McCartney, Springsteen, Bono, Bill Wyman, Eddie Vedder and more - all raving about Van Zandt's skills as a producer and writer, but also as a pioneer in rock 'n' roll. "It seemed like every rock star in the firmament was eager to speak about Stevie," Teck says.

Music is central to the documentary, but Teck also spends time on Van Zandt's activism, especially his integral part in forming the Artited Against Apartheid in the

Influence

"Steve is a guy that will say rock in there and maybe destiny ... has something in mind that, you couldn't have anticipated."

Van Zandt says he was a friend and confidante to Springsteen and one of the few who was honest with him, even when they had artistic differences. Later in the documentary, he draws parallels when his character, Silvio Dante, became the underboss and consiglieri to mob boss Tony Soprano in "The Sopranos.

"Once that role ... started to be written that way, I'm like, 'Oh, I understand these dynamics very well.

I've lived my whole life with this.' So that really helped me, as a first-time actor, to know exactly the dynamics of that relationshin-

NEW YORK: The 2024 BET Awards are fast approaching. Last year's show celebrated 50 years of hip-hop with tributes to the genre's earliest voices, late legends and new talent during a show packed with spectacular performances that consistently felt like a party. This year is stacking up to be just as exciting with award-winning performers - Lauryn Hill, Childish Gambino, Megan Thee Stallion and Will Smith, anyone? - and presenters.

Oscar-nominated actor Taraji P. Henson will host the BET Awards for a third time.

"If we didn't have a BET, how would the little ones know all this greatness exists? How will we be able to inspire each other if we didn't see each other," Henson told The Associated Press. "And so this is a safe space for us where we get to lift each other up - where sometimes in this industry, we don't get to see ourselves lifted and celebrated in this way.'

Drake leads the nominations with seven, including an album of the year nod for his eighth studio album, "For All the Dogs." One of the awards he's up for is the music video for "First Person Shooter," his collaboration with J. Cole that may have been the catalyst for his recent beef with rapper Kendrick Lamar.

Nicki Minaj follows with six, including for album of the year for her highly anticipated "Pink Friday 2" release. Two of her nominations were for her song with Ice Spice, "Barbie World," part of the blockbuster "Barbie" soundtrack.

Performers will include Hill and her son YG Marley, Ice Spice, Tyla, Childish Gambino, Chlöe, Coco Jones, Keke Palmer, Marsha Ambrosius and Summer Walker.

Megan Thee Stallion will serve as the show's opening act.

Smith is slated to perform a new song. The Grammy and Oscar winner is still emerging from the infamous Oscars slap two years ago, with the successful launch of "Bad Boys: Ride or Die" helping boost his comeback.

ROME: The Venice Film Festival announced Friday that it will award the prestigious Golden Lion for Lifetime Achievement this year to actress Sigourney Weaver.

The 74-year-old Weaver is renowned for her roles in two of cinema's most iconic science fiction franchises: the "Alien" series, spanning four films from 1979 to 1997, and the "Avatar" films, released in 2009 and 2022.

Despite never winning an Oscar, Weaver has been nominated for three Academy Awards. She received two nominations for Best Actress in a Leading Role: the first for "Aliens" in 1987, and the second for "Gorillas in the Mist" in 1989, a biographical film about Dian Fossey, a scientist who studied mountain gorillas in Africa. In the same year, she was also nominated for Best Actress in a Supporting Role for the romantic comedy "Working Girl."

Commenting on the honor, Weaver said in a statement, "To be given this award is a privilege I share with all the filmmakers and collaborators I have worked with throughout the years." (Xinhua)

LOS ANGELES: Fans of Marilyn Monroe have won a battle to preserve her mark on Los Angeles and are a step closer to seeing a towering statue of the silver screen icon remain in Palm Springs.

The Los Angeles home where Monroe briefly lived and died has been declared a historic cultural monument, while a Palm Springs planning commission decision boosted chances that a 26-foot (8-meter) statue called "Forever Marilyn" will stay in place.

The Los Angeles City Council voted for the historic designation Wednesday after a lengthy battle over whether the home in the tony Brentwood neighborhood would be demolished, the Los Angeles Times reported.

The current owners live next door and wanted to raze the house in order to expand their estate. The council, however, was unanimous in moving to save it. (AP)

Most children with pink eye get unnecessary antibiotics: study

NEW YORK, June 29, (AP): Doctors are prescribing antibiotics to most kids and teens who have pink eye, despite guidelines that discourage their use, researchers reported Thursday.

More than two-thirds of US children and teens who saw a doctor for pink eye left with a prescription for antibiotic eye drops, their research found. The American Academy of Ophthal-mology recommends that doctors do not routinely give out antibiotics for what's also called conjunctivitis. which usually clears up on its own.

Antibiotics don't work at all on viruses - the most common cause of pink eye. And even mild eye infections from bacteria will resolve on their own in most cases, the medical group says.

Pink eye is highly contagious and causes red, swollen and sometimes itchy eyes. Often, a chilled, wet towel and artificial tears are enough to ease symptoms.

For their study, researchers used

The Conversation is an independent and nonprofit source of news, analysis and commentary from academic experts.

During her chemistry Nobel Prize lecture in 2018, Frances Arnold said, "Today we can for all practical purposes read, write and edit any sequence of DNA, but we cannot compose it." That isn't true anymore.

Since then, science and technology have progressed so much that artificial intelligence has learned to compose DNA, and with genetically modified bacteria, scientists are on their way to designing and making bespoke proteins

The goal is that with AI's designing talents and gene editing's engineering abilities, scientists can modify bacteria to act as mini factories producing new proteins that can reduce greenhouse gases, digest plastics or act as speciesspecific pesticides.

As a chemistry professor and computational chemist who studies molecular science and environmental chemistry, I believe that advances in AI and gene editing make this a realistic possibility

Proteins

All living things contain genetic materials - DNA and RNA - that provide the hereditary information needed to replicate themselves and make proteins. Proteins constitute 75% of human dry weight. They make up muscles, enzymes, hormones, blood, hair and carti lage. Understanding proteins means understanding much of biology. The order of nucleotide bases in DNA, or RNA in some viruses, encodes this information, and genomic sequencing technologies identify the order of these bases. The Human Genome Project was an international effort that sequenced the entire human genome from 1990 to 2003. Thanks to rapidly improving technologies, it took seven years to sequence the first 1% of the genome and another seven years for the remaining 99%. By 2003, scientists had the complete sequence of the 3 billion nucleotide base pairs coding for 20,000 to 25,000 genes in the human genome.

Each protein's shape is critical to its function and is determined by the sequence of its amino acids, which is in turn determined by the gene's nucleotide sequence. Misfolded proteins have the wrong shape and can cause illnesses such as neurodegenerative diseases, cystic fibrosis and Type 2 diabetes. Understanding these diseases and developing treatments requires knowledge of protein shapes.

Technique

Before 2016, the only way to determine the shape of a protein was through X-ray crystallography, a laboratory technique that uses the diffraction of X-rays by single crystals to determine the precise arrangement of atoms and molecules in three dimensions in a molecule. At that time, the structure of about 200,000 proteins had been determined by crystallography, costing billions of dollars.

AlphaFold, a machine learning program, used these crystal structures as a training set to determine the shape of the proteins from their nucleotide sequences. And in less than a year, the program calculated the protein structures of all 214 million genes that have been sequenced and published. The protein structures AlphaFold determined have all been released in a freely available database.

To effectively address noninfectious diseases and design new drugs, scientists need more detailed knowledge of how proteins, especially enzymes, bind small molecules. Enzymes are protein catalysts that enable and regulate biochemical reactions manuelle Charpentier received the Nobel Prize in chemistry "for the development of a method (CRISPR) for genome editing." With CRISPR, gene editing, which once took years and was species specific, costly and laborious, can now be done in days and for a fraction of the cost.

Whether they were treated or not,

AI and genetic engineering are advancing rapidly. What was once complicated and expensive is now routine. Looking ahead, the dream is of bespoke proteins designed and produced by a combination of machine learning and CRISPR-modified bacteria.

AI would design the proteins, and bacteria altered using CRISPR would produce the proteins. Enzymes produced this way could potentially breathe in carbon dioxide and methane while exhaling organic feedstocks, or break down plastics into substitutes for concrete.

I believe that these ambitions are not unrealistic, given that genetically modified organisms already account for 2% of the US economy in agriculture and pharmaceuticals.

Strategy

Two groups have made functioning enzymes from scratch that were designed by differing AI systems. David Baker's Institute for Protein Design at the University of Washington devised a new deep-learning-based protein design strategy it named "family-wide hallucination," which they used to make a unique light-emitting enzyme.

Biotech startup EvolutionaryScale developed a large language model that the company said can design proteins. Meanwhile, biotech startup Profluent has used an AI trained from the sum of all CRISPR-Cas knowledge to design new functioning genome editors. If AI can learn to make new CRISPR systems as well as bioluminescent enzymes that work and have never been seen on Earth, there is hope that pairing CRISPR with AI can be used to design other new bespoke enzymes. Although the CRISPR-AI combination is still in its infancy, once it matures it is likely to be highly beneficial and could even help the world tackle climate change. It's important to remember, however, that the more powerful a technology is, the greater the risks it poses. Also, humans have not been very successful at engineering nature due to the complexity and interconnectedness of natural systems, which often leads to unintended consequences. (AP)

CALIFORNIA, June 29, (AP): Two NASA astronauts will stay longer at the International Space Station as engineers troubleshoot problems on Boeing's new space capsule that cropped up on the trip there.

NASA on Friday did not set a return date until testing on the ground was complete and said the astronauts were safe.

"We're not in any rush to come home," said NASA's commercial crew program manager Steve Stich. Propulsion (cross head)

Veteran NASA test pilots Butch Wilmore and Suni Williams blasted off aboard Boeing's Starliner capsule for the orbiting laboratory on June 5. It was the first astronaut launch for Boeing after years of delays and setbacks.

The test flight was expected to last a week or so, enough time for Wilmore and Williams to check out the capsule while docked at the station. But problems with the capsule's propulsion system, used to maneuver the spacecraft, prompted NASA and Boeing to delay the flight home several times while they analyzed the trouble.

They also wanted to avoid conflicting with spacewalks by station astronauts. But a spacewalk this week was canceled after water leaked from an astronaut's spacesuit. The issue hasn't been resolved and the planned spacewalk next week was postponed. As Starliner closed in on the space station a day after launch, last-minute thruster failures almost derailed the docking. Five of the capsule's 28 thrusters went down during docking; all but one thruster was restarted.

Starliner already had one small helium leak when it rocketed into orbit and several more leaks sprung up during the flight. Helium is used to pressurize fuel for the thrusters. Boeing said this week that the two problems aren't a concern for the return trip.

In delaying the astronauts' return,

NASA and Boeing said they needed more time to collect information about the thruster trouble and leaks while the capsule was docked. Both are in the service module, a unit attached to the capsule that burns up during reentry.

NASA initially said the Starliner could stay docked at the space station for up to 45 days due to battery limits. But in-flight tests have shown that limit can be extended, Stich said. Officials said they won't set a re-

Japan delays H3 rocket launch due to weather

TOKYO, June 29, (Agencies): Japan's space agency said Friday its planned launch this weekend of a satellite on its new flagship H3 rocket will be postponed until Monday due to expected bad weather.

The Japan Aerospace Explora-tion Agency, or JAXA, said it is postponing the launch because of rain and thunder predicted for Saturday night when the rocket was to be moved to the launch site at the Tanegashima Space Center on a southwestern Japanese island.

The launch was initially scheduled for Sunday.

The rocket will be carrying an Advanced Land Observation Satellite, ALOS-4, tasked primarily with Earth observation and data collection for disaster response and mapmaking, as well as with monitoring military activity, such as missile launches, with an infrared sensor developed by the Defense Ministry. The ALOS-4 is a successor to the current ALOS-2 and can observe a much wider area. Japan will operate both for the time being. The launch will be the H3's third,

'Winning 20 gold medals is a very achievable goal'

Host nation France looking forward to medals boost

PARIS, June 29, (Xinhua): A top-five finish in the medal table. The ambitious target announced by President Emmanuel Macron for France's delegation at the 2024 Parvis Olympics appears within reach due to the host nation's advantage and its recent investment in elite athlete development.

Historically, France, one of the birthplaces of the modern Olympic movement, saw its best Olympic performances over a century ago.

In 1900, when Paris hosted the Olympics for the first time, France topped the medal table. In 1924, when Paris hosted again, France finished third. Since then, apart from a third-place finish at the 1948 Games, France has not broken into the top five.

With the Olympics returning to Paris 100 years later, French athletes hope to use this opportunity to reclaim a higher position in the medal standings.

Past Olympic statistics show that host nations often see a significant boost in their medal counts. At the 2008 Beijing Olympics, China's medal tally increased by over 50 percent compared to previous Games. At the 2012 London Olympics, Britain's total medals grew by nearly 40 percent. And at the most recent Tokyo Olympics, Japan's medal count increased by over 40 percent. Even Brazil, with a smaller improvement, saw more than a 10 percent increase in total medals at the 2016 Rio Olympics.

"Our goal, set in coordination with the sports minister, is to be in the top five in the medal table," a French Olympic Committee representative told Xinhua. "In the last Olympics, we won only 10 gold and 33 medals in total. In Paris, we must leverage the home advantage to achieve the best results for the French delegation in recent years." France's ambitions are far from mere rhetoric, as they have taken action to increase their medal count.

In 2019, the country established the National Sports Agency (ANS) outside the government sports department and the French Olympic Committee. The primary goal of this agency is to integrate resources from the government, the Olympic Committee, various sports federations and different sectors of society to enhance support for elite French athletes in terms of logistics and funding.

Furthermore, France's National Institute of Sport, Expertise and Performance (INSEP), which oversees the training and preparation of multiple French national teams, has received unprecedented funding in recent Olympic cycles.

In addition to increasing the income levels of elite athletes to allow them to focus solely on their training, several French national teams have hired a significant number of high-quality overseas coaches and improved training facilities. The aim is to provide these medal hopefuls with world-class coaching and the best possible training conditions.

"Winning 20 gold medals is a very achievable goal. With a bit of luck, we might even exceed that target," said French Olympic Committee President David Lappartient in a recent interview with French media.

According to estimates by the French Olympic Committee, the French delegation is expected to send between 550 and 600 athletes to the Paris Games.

OLYMPICS

Traditional strongholds such as judo, fencing and sailing will remain key areas for France. The French judo team, led by Olympic champions Teddy Riner and Clarisse Agbegnenou, is particularly strong, with French media predicting they could win five to ten medals.

In fencing, Tokyo Olympic men's epee champion Romain Cannone remains a top contender, while the women's sabre team, led by world number one Manon Brunet, is another key medal hope. The fencing team is expected to win five to nine medals.

In swimming, Leon Marchand has shone at the past two World Championships, and at 22, he is a strong contender for gold in the 200m and 400m individual medleys. Notably, Marchand's coach is the legendary Bob Bowman, who once coached Michael Phelps.

In team sports, France's medal hopes are even broader. Beyond the well-known football team, the men's basketball team, led by NBA top draft pick Victor Wembanvama, has the potential to win at least a bronze medal. The men's volleyball team, defending Olympic champion, also remains a strong medal contender despite recent inconsistent performances.

Additionally, the women's 3x3 basketball team and both the men's and women's handball teams have podium potential.

Newly-introduced Olympic sports like climbing and breakdancing also offer medal prospects for French climbers Oriane Bertone and Mickaël Mawem, as well as B-boy Dany Dann and B-Girl Syssy.

"Competing in the Olympics in your own country, in front of your family, is an incredible honor. I believe this honor will inspire our athletes to achieve better results. We will also organize a large French cheering squad to ensure the athletes feel the support of their home crowd," said the French Olympic Committee representative.

ATLANTA, June 29, (AP): The Atlanta Hawks are finalizing talks to trade highscoring Dejounte Murray to the New Orleans Pelicans for a package expected to include two first-round draft picks, according to people with knowledge of the discussions.

The people spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because the trade had not been finalized Friday night.

The Hawks are expected to receive forward-center Larry Nance Jr. and point guard Dyson Daniels in the deal, as well as first-round picks in 2025 and 2029.

The Hawks made swing player Zaccharie Risacher of France the No. 1 overall pick in the NBA draft on Wednesday night before trading AJ Griffin to Houston on Thursday to obtain a second-round pick used to obtain rights to guard/forward Nikola Djurisic of Serbia. The trade of Murray signals the Hawks' offseason overhaul may just be beginning.

cleared all 10 hurdles but faded late and lost by 0.05 to Jamaica's Hansle Parchment, who runs in his country's national championship this weekend. Holloway called it one of the worst races he'd ever run and one of Parchment's best.

Friday's race marked Holloway's third sub-13 run of the season - the second-fastest of his career. Freddie Crittenden was 0.07 seconds behind and Daniel Roberts finished third in 12.96, making this the first race in history with three sub-13 times.

Could an American sweep in the short hurdles - a la what Brianna Rollins, Nia Ali and Kristi Castlin pulled off for the U.S. in the women's race in 2016 - be in the offing this summer?

"We've already put it out there," Holloway said. "I think me, Daniel and Freddie have probably already thought about it once we came through that finish line."

ATHLETICS

Olympic silver medalist Rai Benjamin stayed on pace for a return to the games, finishing his semifinal in the 400 hurdles in 47.97, the only sub-48 time of the meet so far.

Benjamin ran 46.17 at the Tokyo Games to finish second in the fastest 400 hurdle race ever. His mark would have been a world record were it not for Norway's Karsten Warholm, who ran 45.94.

They appear headed for a rematch in Paris. Benjamin said he sees no need to post a time in Sunday's final as a way of sending a message.

"It's just about making this team," Benjamin said. "Once I do that, everything else will take care of itself."

Javelin thrower Kara Winger bought herself a few more throws to turn her comeback into her fifth trip to the Olympics.

Next up, she needs to eke out another meter.

The 38-year-old threw 63.01 meters (206 feet, 8 inches) to win qualifying and advance to Sunday's finals. But it will take more than a mere top-three finish for her to make it to Paris. She will also need to throw 64 meters, which is the Olympic qualifying standard.

"Every single throw matters, every single throw can be 64 meters," she said. "And I know I have it in me. But (63.01 is) the farthest I've ever thrown at trials."

Eric Holt, who made a splash by getting a sponsor this week at trials, initially earned the last qualifying spot for 800 final but was later disqualified for a lane infraction.

Two-time triple jump gold med-alist Christian Taylor, making one last run at the Olympics, advanced through qualifying and will jump for a spot in Sunday's final.

Also returning to the track this weekend is 41-year-old hurdler Lolo Jones, who finished last in her heat but advanced because no one was eliminated in a small prelim field.

Veteran yet to open score

Ronaldo still Portugal's main man despite slow start at Euro 2024

DORTMUND, Germany, June 29, (AP): Cristiano Ronaldo has been a showstopper, as expected, at the European Championship. Just not necessarily in the way he'd like to be.

The Portugal superstar with 632 million followers on Instagram and a never-ending stream of endorsement deals has had to deal with a raft of on-field selfie-seekers, during matches and in training. One presumed super-fan even leapt from the stands over the players' tunnel toward a startled-looking Ronaldo as he headed to the locker room after Portugal's match against Georgia. He's raged at a referee (earning a yellow card), booted away a water bottle, and angrily remonstrated in the dug-out. He's also had 12 shots, more than anyone else at Euro 2024

What Ronaldo hasn't done is score a goal - and that's the currency he deals in, at least in soccer.

OK, there was that moment he passed up a golden chance to score by passing unselfishly to Bruno Fernandes for Portugal's third goal in the 3-0 win over Turkey. A double-stepover that befuddled Abdulkerim Bardakci and left the Turkey center back on his back has proved a hit on social media and gave the world a reminder of the Ronaldo of 10, 15, even 20 years ago.

Ronaldo, though, is 39 now. Those big moments have become fleeting, especially when it comes to the big tour-naments and when he's playing against top-level defenses.

Make that seven straight matches in which he has failed to score at a major tournament, covering the 2022 World Cup and Euro 2024. For the first time in his 21-year international career taking in five World Cups and six European Championships, he has ended a group stage without a goal.

So, with the powers of this undoubted soccer great on the wane, the question will again be asked heading into the knockout stage: will the constant drama surrounding Ronaldo wind up being a distraction for the Portugal team in its bid for another big soccer title, eight years after winning its only one at Euro 2016? Roberto Martinez clearly doesn't think so. The Portugal coach is in thrall with Ronaldo, as shown by his reaction to the striker's assist - his record-tying eighth at the European Championship against Turkey.

"It should be shown in every academy in Portugal and world football," Martinez said, purring at this "spectacular" piece of play.

A day earlier, he'd got into an exchange with a journalist who questioned whether Ronaldo could handle the intensity of a major tournament at age 39.

"All you need to do is look at what he has done in the last 12 months," Martinez proffered, pointing to his record in the Saudi league with Al-Nassr, for whom he started 31 of 34 games and scored a league-high 35 goals, and his 10 goals in Euro 2024 qualifying - second only to Belgium's Romelu Lukaku.

Before the tournament, Martinez had lauded Ronaldo by saying he "approaches every day as a new way to be the best" and that his stats "are better than anything, subjectively, that you can say.

Maybe to justify his arguments - or who knows, to keep in Ronaldo's good books - Martinez started the striker against Georgia despite resting all of his other key outfield players for a game that meant little for Portugal, which had already qualified as group winner.

It was at this stage at the last World Cup where Ronaldo lost his place in Portugal's team, to the shock and anger of his millions of fans who might not see him play as much these days be-cause of his move to the Middle East. He had started all three of the group games, scoring only a penalty, and reacted poorly to being substituted by then-coach Fernando Santos against South Korea in the third. Ronaldo didn't start the 6-1 win over Switzerland in the round of 16 - his replacement, Goncalo Ramos scored a hat trick - nor the quarterfinal loss to Morocco, after which he left the field in tears.

Given his public comments, it's unlikely Martinez will follow Santos' path and drop his captain in the knockout stage, starting against Slovenia on Monday, for what may prove to be Ronaldo's last matches at a major tournament.

COLOGNE, Germany, June 29: (AP): Spain takes on Georgia in the round of 16 at Euro 2024 on Sunday. Spain is widely considered one of the tournament favorites after winning all three of its group games, but Georgia produced the shock result of Euro 2024 so far by beating Portugal.

Spain was the only team to finish the group stage with a perfect record of three wins and its 1-0 victory over defending champion Italy underlined its credentials to win the European title for the first time since 2012.

Spain had no trouble beating Georgia twice in qualifying last year. A 7-1 rout saw Lamine Yamal set a record for youngest ever goalscorer in a Euros qualifier, just two months after his 16th birthday.

LAS VEGAS, June 29, (Xinhua): Vinicius Junior scored twice as Brazil all but secured a spot into the Copa America quarterfinals on Friday with a 4-1 victory over Paraguay.

Real Madrid forward Vinicius netted either side of a Savinho strike before Omar Alderete reduced the deficit with a long-range effort.

Lucas Paqueta made up for an earlier penalty miss by converting from the spot just after the hour as Brazil clinched its first win of the tournament.

The result leaves the five-time World Cup winner second in Group D with four points, two points behind Colombia and three ahead of thirdplaced Costa Rica. Max takes pole for Austrian GP SPIELBERG, Austria, June 29, (AP): Max Verstappen is looking unbeatable again at the Austrian Grand Prix.

The Formula 1 leader followed up his win in the sprint race on Saturday with another dominant performance in qualifying to take pole position for the fourth straight year at the Red Bull Ring

It ended a streak of three straight races where the three-time defending F1 champion failed to take pole position, and dealt a blow to his closest rivals who hoped to challenge him on Red Bull's home circuit this weekend.

MOTOR RACING

"It's been a while that we've actually been on pole. So it's a great feeling," Verstappen said. "This is a great statement and hopefully we can also show that tomorrow in the race.'

After qualifying in the last three races was decided by narrow margins, this one wasn't even close.

Verstappen's final lap in the third qualifying session beat McLaren's Lando Norris by 0.404 seconds and earned his eighth pole of the season. Norris' teammate Oscar Piastri was initially third but had his time deleted for narrowly going outside track limits, pushing him down to seventh place and lifting George Russell of Mercedes into third.

Carlos Sainz Jr. of Ferrari and Lewis Hamilton of Mercedes round hour at Allegiant Stadium when he sent his penalty attempt wide following an Andres Cubas hand ball.

But he went some way to making amends moments later as his delightful through ball found Vinicius, who dashed away from his marker and slotted a shot below goalkeeper Rodrigo Morinigo.

Girona forward Savinho extended the lead by tapping in from close range after Rodrygo's shot was parried clear by Morinigo.

Brazil's confidence grew by the minute and it extended its lead on the stroke of halftime through Vinicius, who stabbed home a first-time effort after Alderete's errant clearance.

Paraguay emerged from the interval with a renewed sense of purpose and Alderete atoned for his earlier error by controlling a high ball with his chest and thumping an unstoppable 25-yard drive into the bottom-right corner.

But Brazil continued to attack and it was awarded another penalty when Mathias Villasanti was deemed to have blocked Savinho's attempt on goal with his left arm.

Paqueta again stepped up for the spot-kick and this time the West Ham midfielder calmly chipped his shot into the bottom right corner.

Paraguay was reduced to 10 men nine minutes from time after Cubas' studs up challenge on Douglas Luiz earned the Vancouver Whitecaps midfielder a straight red card.

Brazil controlled the match thereafter as it put its campaign back on track following a goalless draw with Costa Rica last Monday.

Colombia secured a place in the Copa America quarterfinals on Friday with a 3-0 victory over Costa Rica, a result that extended the Cafeteros winning sequence to 10 games.

Liverpool forward Luis Diaz put his side ahead from the penalty spot at State Farm Stadium after Jhon Cordoba was brought down by Patrick Sequeira.

Galatasaray's Davinson Sanchez doubled advantage with a towering header following Jhon Arias's corner.

Colombia put the game beyond doubt just after the hour when James Rodriguez's sublime one-touch pass released Cordoba, who smashed a first-time effort into the far corner.

"We have a great group of players that are giving all they have for the team," Diaz said afterwards. "We are slowly moving towards our objective, step by step, but we know there will be some tough games ahead."

Once seen as a unifying force

England fans fall out of love with Southgate

DUESSELDORF, Germany, June 29 (AP): Gareth Southgate was credited with making England fans fall back in love with their national soccer team. Now many are turning on him.

Despite England advancing unbeaten to the round of 16 at the European Championship in Germany, criticism has been fierce.

"I would have got rid of him before this tournament," said Charlie O'Shea, a 32-year-old England fan from London, who traveled to Germany for the tournament.

The team isn't "really gelling," said O'Shea, wearing a retro blue England shirt.

"I think he needs to pick players that actually fit together in terms of the system ... and I don't think he's got the personality to actually do that," he said. "When he's in the changing room when it's not going well, are you going to listen to Gareth Southgate? No.3

He sustained a broken collarbone and ribs and a collapsed lung and had not raced since.

Bardet, the Frenchman who finished second in 2016 and third in 2017 and is racing his last Tour, attacked with slightly more than 50 kilometers (30 miles) to go. He caught up with his DSM-Firmenich PostNL teammate Frank van den Broek, who was in an early breakaway, and the pair just barely held off the onrushing peloton in the flat finish.

Bardet surged ahead of his teammate at the line and pointed to him to say, "Thank you."

World Cup in 2018 and the final of the last Euros

He believes Southgate speaks to a 'gentle patriotism" rather than the "aggressive or toxic culture wars we've been living in, in the rest of the political environment."

The play "Dear England" will be adapted for television and updated with the outcome of these Euros, which has seen the story take a dramatic turn with some fans losing faith.

There has been little sign of any feel-good factor in Germany, with England only winning one of its three group games - 1-0 against Serbia. The sense among England fans is the team, which was one of the pretournament favorites, is underachieving despite having star players like Harry Kane, Jude Bellingham and Phil Foden.

LJUBLJANA, June 29: Today marks the beginning of the second phase of our national youth handball team's training camp in Slovenia. This camp is part of their preparation for the 18th edition of the Asian Championship, which also serves as the 2025 World Cup Qualifiers. The championship will be held in Amman, Jordan, from July 16-26, with Kuwait competing in Group B alongside Iran and China.

Under the guidance of head coach Saeed Hegazy and assistant coach Mohamed Masoudan, the first phase of the camp focused on enhancing technical and physical skills, as well as increasing endurance. During this initial phase, the youth team played two friendly matches against Slovenia and Saudi Arabia.

In the second phase, starting today, the coaching staff will concentrate on finalizing the starting lineup for the Asian Championship and will include two additional friendly matches

Team director Abdulaziz Al-Zaabi expressed satisfaction with the initial preparation phase, noting the clear and multiplied efforts of everyone involved. He praised the players for their commitment both on and off the field, despite the demanding daily schedule. "We were concerned about the pos-
